It can be easy to feel powerless against the scale of issues facing the world
Hunger
Death
Sadness

However, within the scale of the city the community becomes a viable protagonist for change

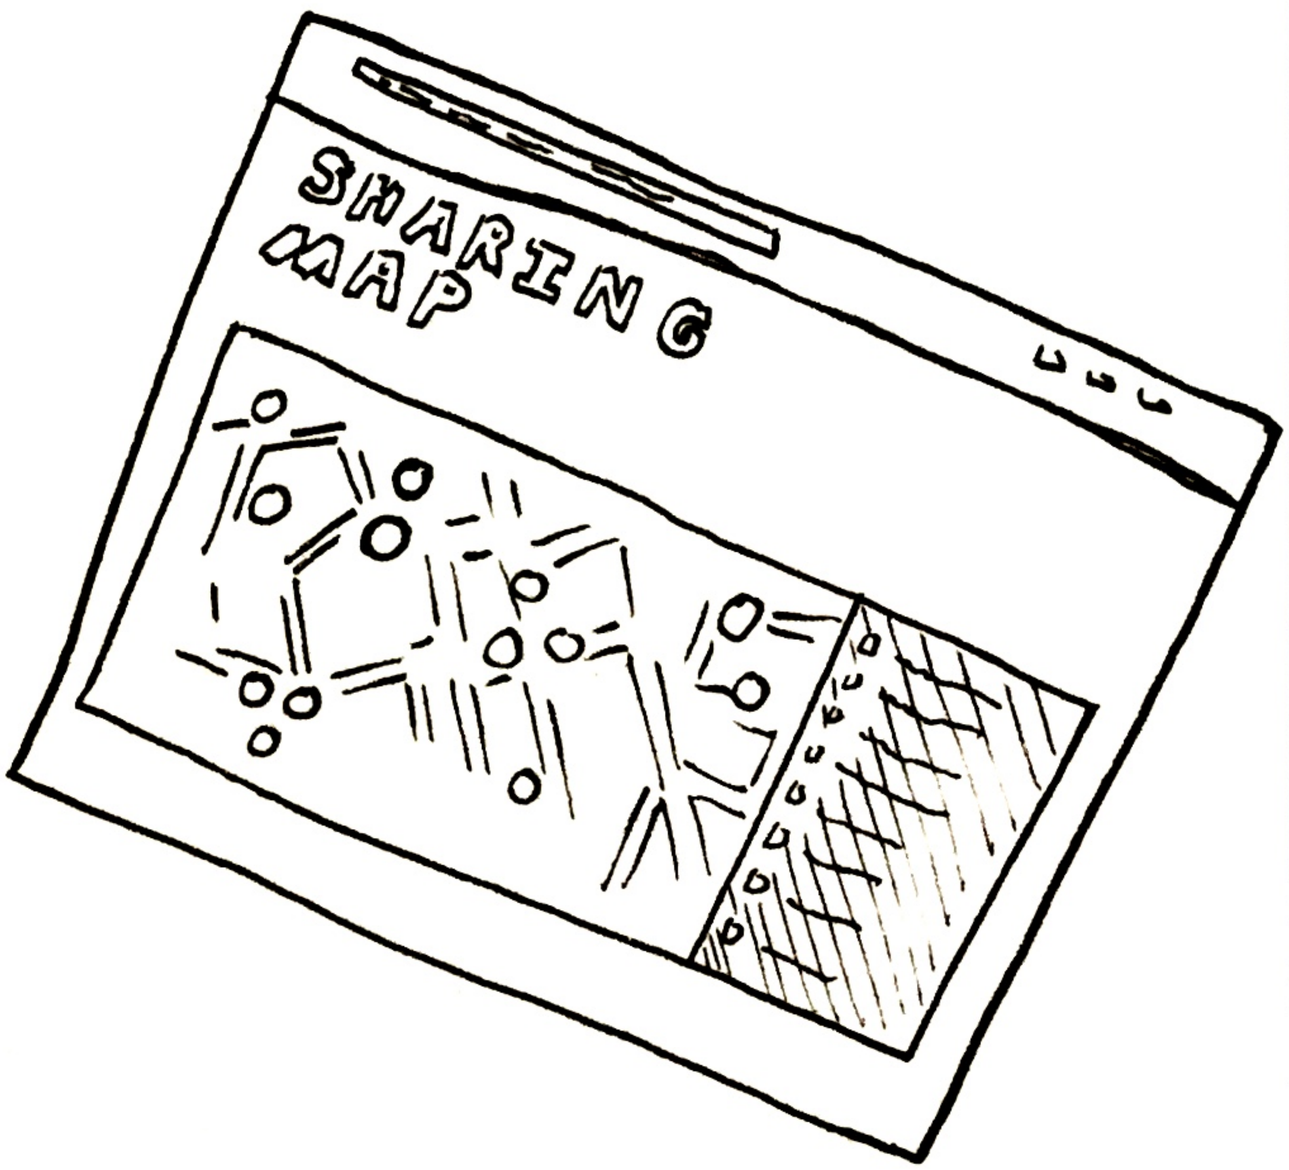
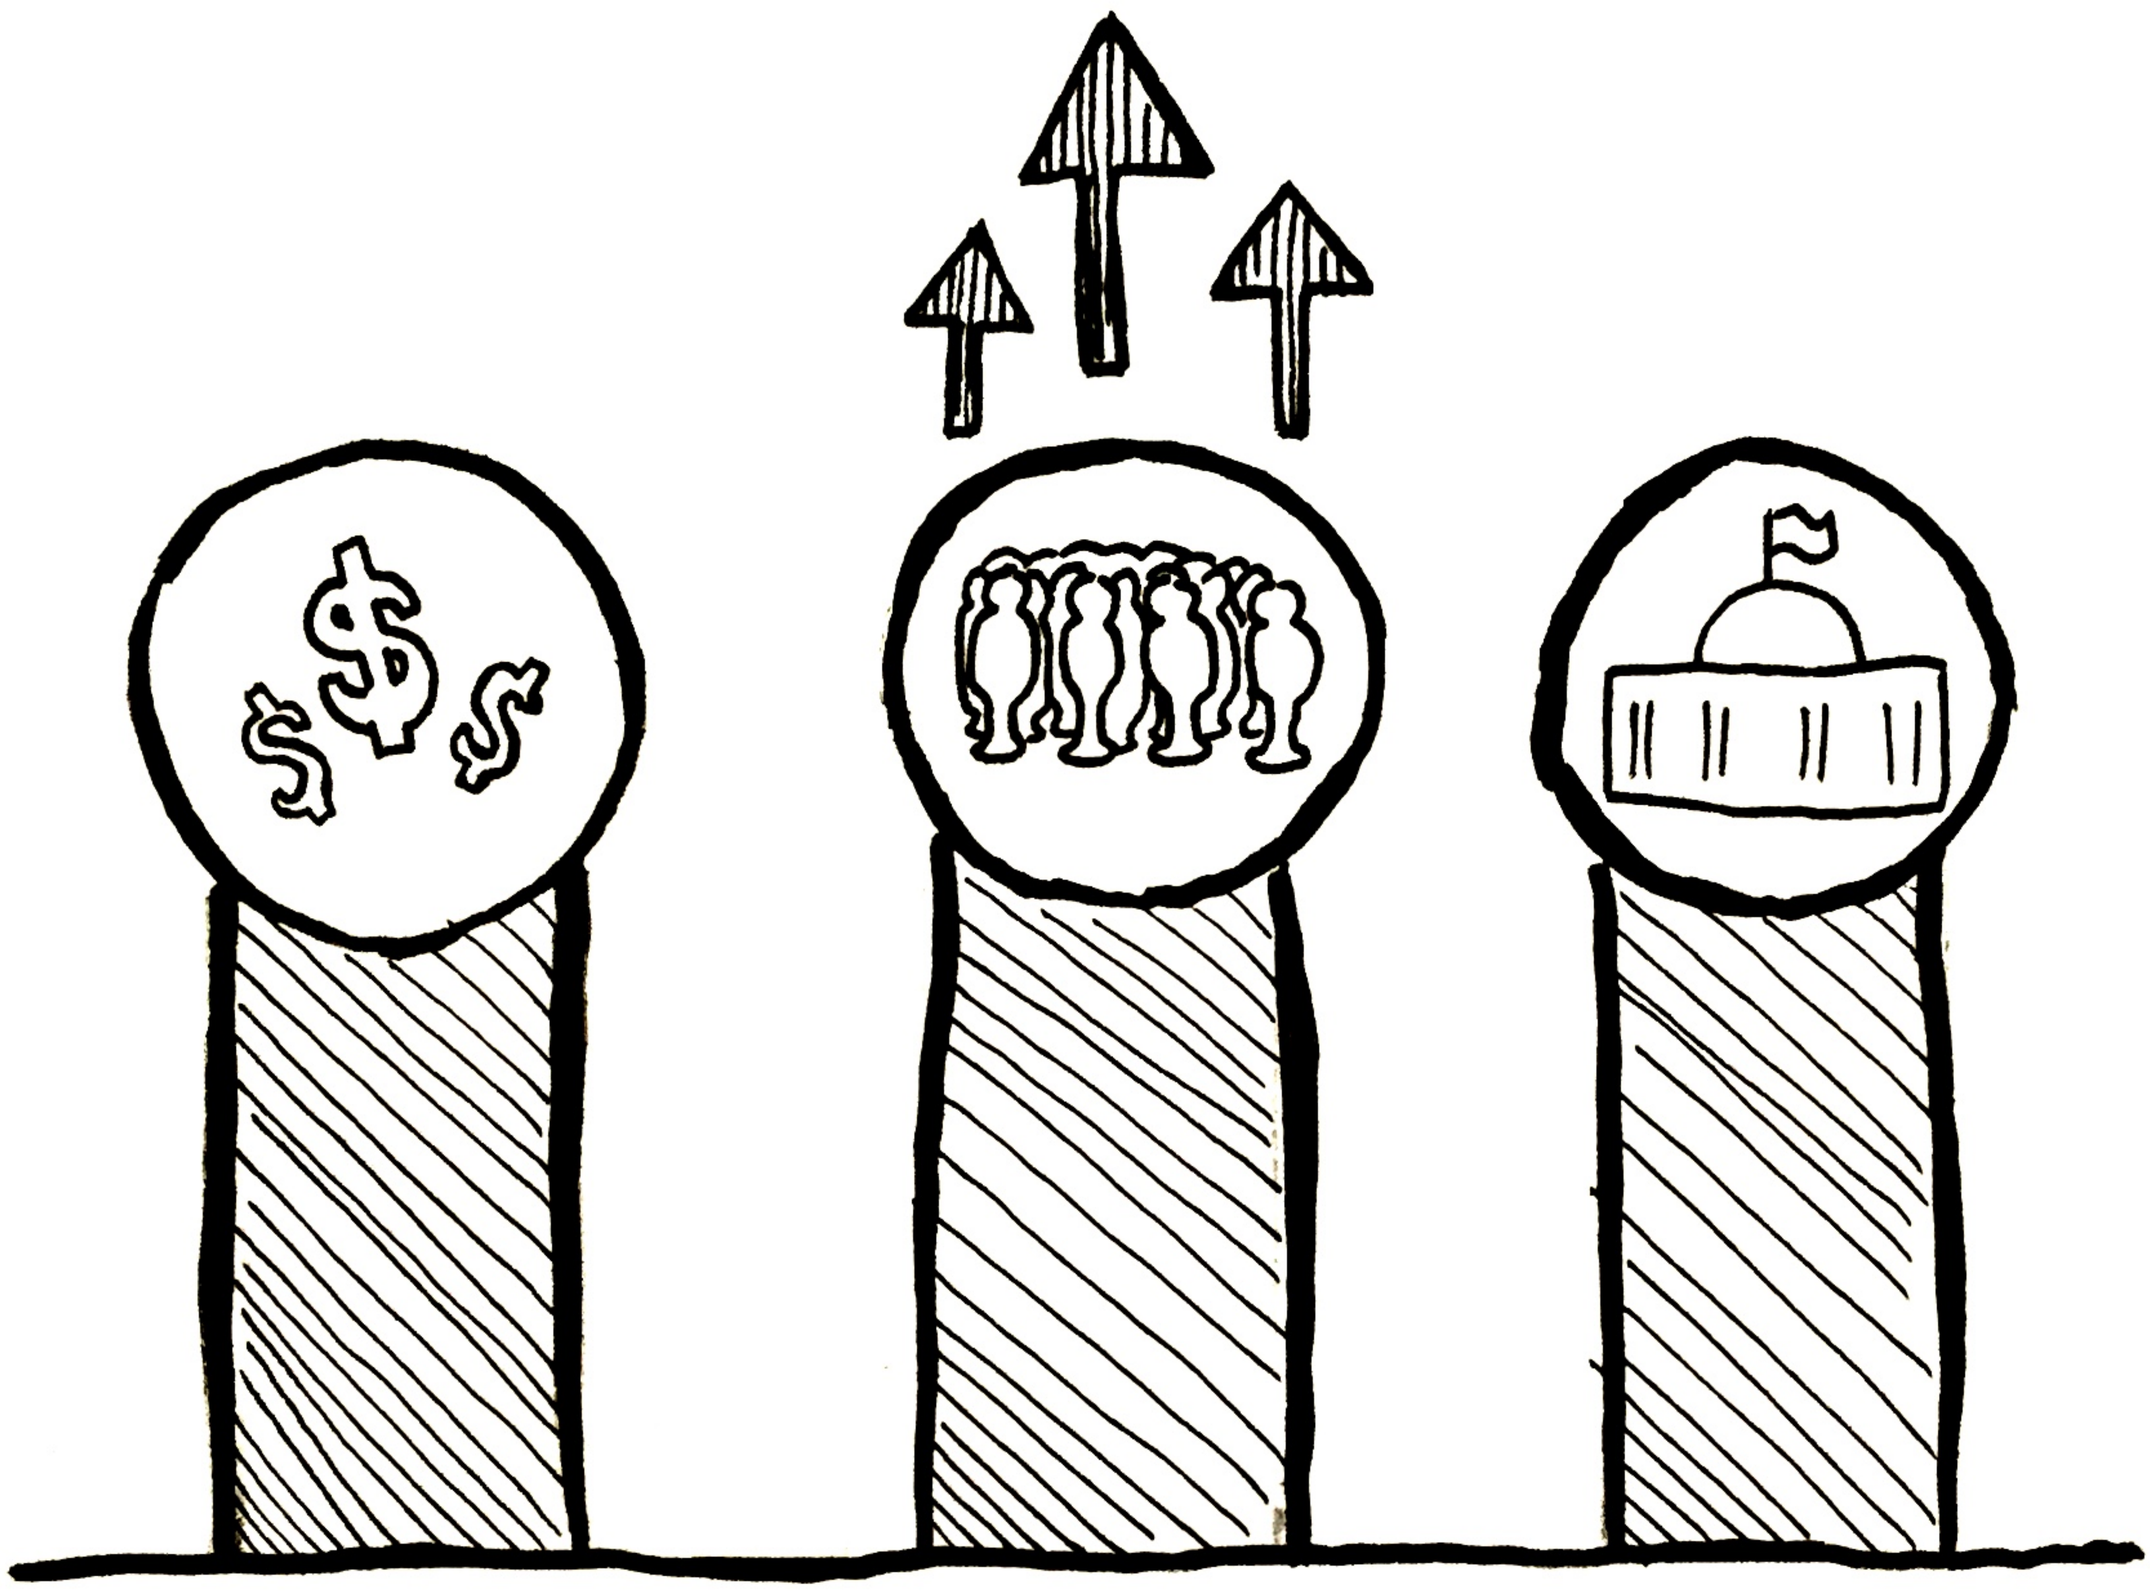
A community can make a claim to the city. By making demands to local government & through local, grassroots activities.

Making a claim to the city not as users. But also makers.

Look around you. There will be people in your community already making this claim

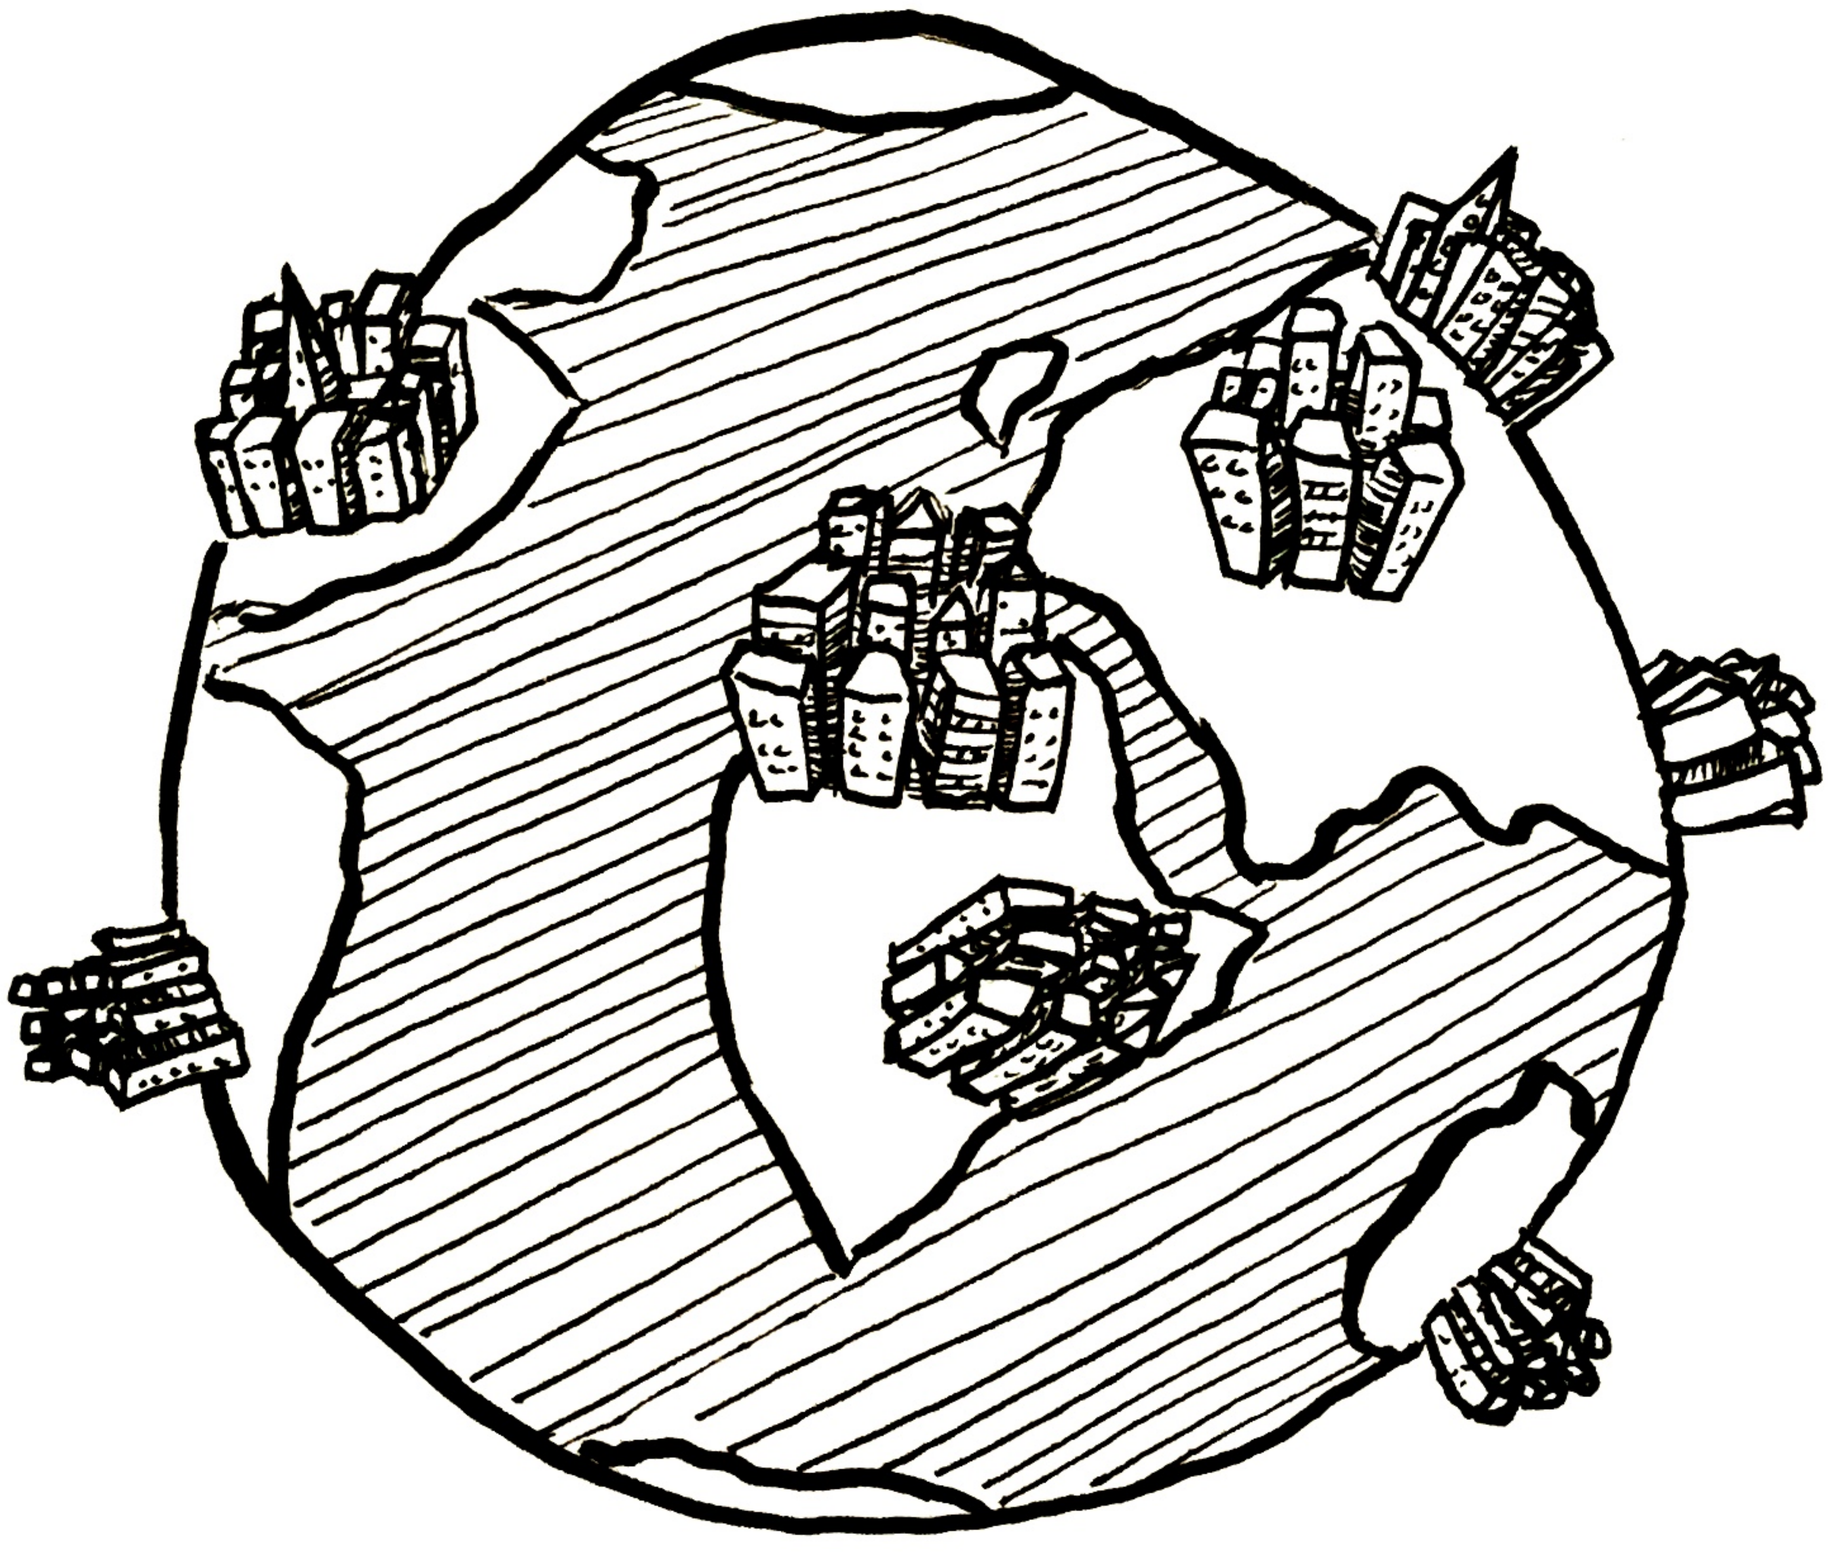


Community centres or online asset maps such as the Sharing Map are great places to start



Such actions re-assert the position of the community amongst market & state influences

As such, cities can become actors for communities on the world stage



Providing local scale solutions to help address global issues
