welcome

The only reason I ever attended high school athletics carnivals was on the off chance I'd get to see someone to drop the baton in the relays. I know, I know, I'm a terrible person, but come on - it's hilarious. However, it's Week 12 guys, and with one more sprint to go do not drop the baton.

This week's Blitz is an homage to the sporting heroes of UNSW. The main event is the DL on Eastern Uni Games (p8), so that no unsuspecting UNSW-ian heads up to Tamworth unprepared. Uni Games are an essential uni experience, and when I look back through the revolting pictures from my first games last year I have no regrets, only chuckles.

Some of our UNSW peers are heading even further than Tamworth chasing their sporting ambitions. Check out our interviews with Quiditch wizard Beth Crane (p7) and Paralympic cyclist Alex Green (p17) who are both heading over to London chasing dreams and gold. Go you good things!

A quickie with

UNSW QUIDDITCH CHAMP AND OLYMPIC HOPEFUL BETH CRANE

Magic, Muggles and Medals.

No one would blame you for thinking that we're actually at the University of Witchcraft and Wizardry after hearing about Computer Science undergrad and Harry Potter buff Beth Crane's latest achievement: being picked for the Australian Quidditch team at The London Olympics this July.

Are you surprised how much the sport has taken flight from the pages of Harry Potter and spread around the world? I wouldn't really say surprised, just that I'm very impressed with how much the Americans have taken to it, and how well the IQA (International Quidditch Association) have managed to promote it. There's a long way to go before we reach the place we'd like to be in, but heading to The Olympics is sure to help!

When did you first jump on the broom?
There were two games held in O-Week in 2011 that I took part in as part of the O-Week extreme program. The then-president of The UNSW Quidditch Society, Justin Chau, asked me to join the team. After that, I signed up to the UNSW Society and by November of last year I was playing in the Quidditch Universities of Australian Federation League (QUAFL).

What's the training regime like for a professional Quidditch player?
I train with the UNSW Quidditch Society weekly, focusing on Quidditch-specific things - types of tackles, strategy, shaking practice etc. I also train separately, building up my own strength and fitness with a mix of running, gym work and rock climbing - but that one's mostly for fun.

Have you ever found it hard juggling a degree with your Quidditch games and training?
It's just really important to maintain a balance between all the things I have going on - however it's a bit of work to get everything done at the moment with the amount of training and all the fundraising activities happening before we head to London.

Being as poetic as J.K. Rowling herself, can you describe what it was like finding out that you had made the Australian Quidditch team?
When the IQA (International Quidditch Association) announced that they were taking applications I put my name down, and after some back-and-forth questions I later got an email announcing I was in - and I was terrified! There's a bit of pressure in representing the country for anything - particularly when this is Australia's first time playing on an international level, but mostly it's just all incredibly exciting.

So what are your expectations for the first ever Quidditch Olympics?

Once it starts I'm expecting a high level of competition from Team UK, and, in particular, Team USA - it'll be a great experience playing against the two longest-running countries. I'm also really looking forward to getting the chance to meet a larger group of Quidditch players. Playing in the UK is about as appropriate as it can get, given the books I came from were written there.

Beth will be packing her very best broomstick when she flies off as the lone UNSW student in the Australian team. The muggles at Blitz wish her all the best and pray that the one we don't speak of keeps his distance and lets the magic happen...

Our girl Beth gets swept away during Quidditch matches on the Physics Lawn. But will that broom fly her all the way to London?

ARC Student Life

Loose up, get down and wheel it around - Roller Disco is back in town.

Hitting a roller disco is like watching Winter Olympic figure skaters on crack - except you don't have to worry about someone getting a finger sliced off. The party people from Roller Girl Promoters have teamed up with the cool crew from the Roundhouse to bring you a night of wheels and wonder.

There'll be a bunch of DJs to get you groovin' as you're rollin', a photobooth and the disco will be open until 1am for all the night owls in skates. Just an FYI this is an 18+ event - we don't bring your little brother or sister who loves roller skating along.

Check out rollergirlpromoters.com.au for more info, tickets and details for crazy costumes.

UNDER MILK WOOD

• Antonia Shuttleworth

A Play for Voices

It's almost the end of first semester and Blitz thinks you've worked sufficiently hard and matured just enough to enjoy something fancy at the Sydney Opera House.

We highly recommend you go down to the woods today. Milk Wood that is. Come and enjoy the Sydney Theatre Company's outstanding production of Dylan Thomas' much loved poem, opening this week at the Opera House.

While it will be difficult to top the particularly pleasant pairing of Elizabeth Taylor and Peter O'Toole in the 1972 film version, Kip Williams has created a vivid and engaging portrayal of the eccentric community living in the small Welsh town of Llareggub.

Throughout the course of one day, from pre-dawn to nightfall, Under Milk Wood examines the power and passion found in relationships within a small town through a series of sketches, caricatures and devastating moments of human fragility. There are exclamations, achievements and disappointments galore, and if you thought that living in Sydney was a bubble then come along and experience the microcosm that is found Under Milk Wood.

WIN For your chance to score a double pass to see Under Milk Wood on Tuesday June 5 at 8pm email blitz@arc.unsw.edu.au with "Milky" as the subject and quote for us the first line from your favourite poem.

LET'S TALK ABOUT SEX

Black & White & Sex Screening

Monday 21 May 7pm
@ Hoyts Entertainment Quarter
Cost: $15

Black & White & Sex takes you behind the scenes and into "Angie's very special world" - the question is: who is Angie? Well you'll have to come along to find out. At the same time you'll discover (apparently) everything you didn't know you had to know about what men and women want. This should also be really interesting as Fiona Patten, founder of The Australian Sex Party, will be introducing the film.

THIS MEANS WAR

State Of Origin Game 1
Wednesday 23 May 8pm
@ The Roundhouse

Keeping with the sporting theme of the week, why not grab some mates and head to The Roundhouse or your local to watch the first battle in this epic yearly war. This is the week when you start giving anyone from Queensland a shifty look. Other options for viewing include calling up that friend who has the massive flat screen TV - your choice, just don't forget to wear blue for NSW.

RESPECT THE PAST, CHANGE THE FUTURE

National Sorry Day
Saturday 24 May
@ All around Sydney

This day gives people the chance to come together and share the steps towards healing for the Stolen Generations, their families and communities. The Stolen Generations refer to Indigenous Australians who were forcibly removed from their families and communities. There'll be bbqs, fundraisers, marches and public talks in the city and in most suburbs so keep an eye out for deets.

NOM NOM NOM

Anatolian Turkish Festival
Sunday 27 May 10am until 11pm
@ Darling Harbour

You already love Turkish bread and Turk from Scrubs, now prepare to fall in love with Turkish music, wrestling, dancing and catch some dramatic re-enactments of battles and scenes from Turkish history.

SPORTS THAT AREN'T REALLY SPORTS

Chess

You can play chess with a cheeseburger in one hand and a beer in the other. You can also play while you're laid out on the lounge watching Jerry Springer. You can even play while you're sitting on the can. For these reasons alone, Chess is not a sport.

Fishing

Boy do I hate fishing. As much as this may come across as biased, it also comes across as completely true. In fishing your bait lures the fish, you sit on a wharf wishing you had reception while your over-excited dad talks to you about the wonders of nature. Go for a run old man, fish have feelings too.

Darts

To prove this point all I have to do is tell you to look at a world darts championship on YouTube, where you'll see overweight, bearded men wearing gloves that supposedly stabilize your hand. Plus the sport is generally played in a pub, hardly a sporting haven. Oh please, you darts players aren't fooling anyone.

Poker

Poker is a game, not a sport. Yes you can bet, yes there are tournaments, so what? That doesn't define what a sport is. You can play poker for 10 hours straight all whilst remaining seated in a chair - how does that show physical prowess? So you work up a sweat when you decide to raise - try cliff diving my friend.

Tenpin Bowling

It annoys me when I see tenpin bowling on TV and the participants are taking themselves so seriously. I went bowling for my seventh birthday and I remember getting a strike countless times, so unless I am some sort of bowling prodigy, I can't ever rate this game as challenging.

Agree or disagree? If there are any other fake sports that grind your gears shoot us an email at blitz@arc.unsw.edu.au or post on facebook.com/blitzmag

MASTERCHEF UNSW

The Arc Student Cookbook is hunting and gathering for people to attend the 2012 Student Cookbook Launch (see the beautiful ad below for details).

Food is an essential part of our everyday life. We all cook it, shop for it, complain about hunger, (especially during four hour lecture blocks) and enjoy when a mouth-watering meal hits the spot. This year the Student Cookbook is all about heart-warming meals that'll fill you up on a tight student budget.

But the most important thing to remember about food is that we can make a big impact with the tiniest of food choices. Did you know that buying local and seasonal fruit is reducing your impact on the environment? Or that there are foods made negatively impacting on the livelihoods of people that make them?

Well if not, it is time to start a food conversation and understand the complexities of the current food system. Why are there so many with little food and so few people eating a lot of food? Famine and obesity side by side doesn't paint a pretty picture of modern society.

What does look pretty however, is the 2012 Student Cookbook, which is your food conversation starter, so come along next Tuesday and collect your copy.

GREEN FOR GOLD

Think you're cool for riding your bike to uni? Well UNSW Engineering student and world champion Alex Green is riding her bike for Australia at the 2012 Paralympics.

As UNSW students, we have a lot to be proud of: a beautiful campus, prestigious institution and decent enough career prospects - not to mention the champions in our midst. Fresh from the Union Cycliste Internationale Para-cycling World Championships in LA, 4th year Engineering student Alex Green is already psyching up for the London Paralympics.

She took a breather from her intensive training schedule for an exclusive chat with Blitz about sports, study, and how to thrive in the face of a challenge.

So what's the deal on para-cycling from someone on the inside track?

There are four events for para-cyclists: on the track, there's the 3000m individual pursuit and the 500m time trial, and on the road there's a road race and a time trial. My best is the 3000m individual pursuit - I'm the world champion in that event. I'm not much of a sprinter though, so the 500m I kinda fail at - I just do it for fun.

And how do they measure disabilities to ensure a fair race?

Everybody who competes has to be classified by an international board of physios and doctors (and) they have criteria for measuring how your disability affects you on the bike. Mine's quite low, affecting only one of my legs, which puts me in the C4 category.

Was cycling always your dream career?

I was actually originally a rower on the Australian Adaptive Rowing Team, competed in the '09 World Championships, then got into cycling as cross-training and the head coach saw me at a training session and wanted to try and get me into cycling. It was an easy choice - I love cycling.

I was riding for about six months before I made the team in 2010, and won bronze in my first World Championships; this year I went again and won gold. Scoring a World Championship jersey and being selected for the team for London have been the proudest moments of my life.

It all happened so fast! Has it been hard to suddenly balance your studies and a cycling career?

It's pretty hard! I've had to defer uni this year in the lead-up to the Paralympics. Doing Engineering you're constantly in the labs, which obviously you can't do when you're overseas - last semester, I was away for six out of 12 weeks. But the Engineering Faculty's been so supportive; it's really good going to UNSW.

So apart from being part of a good faculty, what's your advice to other students looking to overcome a disability and get the most out of life?

Don't let disability hold you back - you can do anything you want to, as long as you put your mind to it. My coach and having such good people around me really helps - my family's wonderful. And it's not hard to get on the bike when you live in a beautiful city like Sydney.

And I thought it was an achievement to pass Contracts... With only two months to go, it's not far to London - especially if you're on a bike. We'll be with her all the way.

Scoring a World Championship Jersey and being selected for the team for London have been the proudest moments of my life.

HARD LIVING IN THE EASTERN SUBURBS

overprivileged.tumblr.com

When I found this new blog just a couple of weeks ago already I'd missed some kind of mad b-grade Sydney media storm about bullying. Whatever - this shit's hilarious and I'm overjoyed that I'm finally gonna be able to contribute to a tumblr just by going through the Facebooks of kids I went to school with.

Hard Living in the Eastern Suburbs' content consists of photos submitted by readers, and the curators themselves, of people they know partying, wearing fake tan and raising their hands in a position they've dubbed 'disco arms'. I'm sure that not everybody who appears comes from the Eastern Suburbs. But stereotypes are fun, particularly when enjoyed at the expense of the rich and the orange.

Some of their best moments come from attempts at defending themselves when accused of bullying. "Is it possible the rich and tanned take themselves too seriously?"

Keep up the humour.

ELECTRONIC EARTH

Labrinth

This producer turned artist has hooked his extensive experience in the urban pop industry to engineer his debut album for a singular purpose: climbing charts. By this criteria, and with three hit singles already, he succeeds admirably.

Timothy "Labrinth" McKenzie is a good producer, and he's dumped his entire bag of pop tricks onto the table: reverberated choirs, squealing synths, vocoder, rock licks, booming sub and drum machines. If the sound of an autotune makes you want to blow torch your ears off, step away from the album and turn your radio off for the next six months.

It would appear his anthemic call to "rise against the machine" has backfired. Especially once you consider that such lyrical gems as "every day she want to bite my pillow, every day she want to sweat on window," could only have been written by an online poem machine. If the idea of a boy band of androids doing their rendition of Lion King meets Star Wars appeals to you, call me up and I'll give you my copy.

• Chris Long

OBIE TRICE

Bottoms Up

Obie Trice heralds his return to the mic as a big thing, the only question is whether anybody's listening? With guest appearances by his mainest homies Eminem and Dr. Dre, he comes off much like he used to, only slightly less entertaining.

In the six years that Trice hasn't been rapping you'd have hoped that he'd at least have been listening to a bit of rap. Or maybe he has - but he's gone downhill since his earlier efforts, and he hasn't taken advantage of the huge developments within the genre that have taken place over that time.

And if you're after more witty party hits, too bad. There's nothing witty about "I just wanna fuck you / you just wanna fuck me." And the rhythmic fun of old hits like "Teeth" is lacking.

This is an album with twice the self-indulgence and half the fun of his earlier efforts. It's still good, but if you're a fan, don't get your hopes up.

For your chance to score a copy of the album email blitz@arc.unsw.edu.au with "8 Mile" in the title and tell us a rap about Blitz.

ARMAGEDDON RAG

George R. R. Martin

For Game of Thrones fans, this is not Westeros.

Armageddon Rag seems at times rather self-reflective, as Martin writes from the heart of the lost 60's movement, and its music, with a touch of the occult.

Disillusioned novelist and former hippie Sandy Blair escapes his writers block by accepting a journalistic assignment to cover the brutal ritualistic death of rock promoter Jamie Lynch. Lynch's death opens the door for a reunion tour of The Nazgul, a band contracted to Lynch for life.

As the band rehearses, Blair becomes their press agent, even though he suspects their new manager has sinister motives for this reunion. The end of the world and its rebirth may be at stake, and Blair must choose a side.

A ripping yarn and Martin's sense of the music is captivating - I've been happily singing along to Black Sabbath in my head all week.

THE CLOCK

Museum of Contemporary Art

Tilt your head and furrow your brow at the MCAs most recent cinematic exhibition. Christian Marclay has put what would seem like a billion hours of work into The Clock, a 24 hour montage video.

Several thousand movie segments are collaged, each with the common link of clocks and time. The extracts are precisely placed in sequence to match real-life time, so 30 minutes in don't be the fool who looks at their watch and whispers "hey, it's the ACTUAL time".

Despite what you would expect, this patchwork of cinema scenes is neither disjointed nor interruptive. A narrative of its own is formed from the web of plotlines, periods and genres generating an impressive masterpiece of art.

The Clock is on display until the 3rd of June, during normal opening hours and run for its 24 hour entirety on Thursdays. Free and with couches provided, the MCA knows what I like.

GROOVIN' THE MOO

University of Canberra

As Groovin' The Moo continued its way to Canberra, not even the arctic conditions swayed 15,000 punters from gathering together to celebrate, dance and literally chill to a truly outstanding lineup.

The day began with a set of soulful melodies from Matt Corby, including his live rendition of "Brother" and hence had the entire venue "ooh-ing" and clapping along to his heartfelt performance.

The rest of the day was well spread-out between the two main stages (Channel V Triple J and the Moo-in Rouge tent which comprised of more dance-able tunes.

Kaiser Chiefs was the definite stand-out this year which brought the Moo home with Ricky Wilson the lead singer, performing an entire song midair from the ride next to the stage where the band continued playing. He continued to get the crowd going as he climbed scaffolds and crowd-surfed whilst simultaneously belting out unforgettable choruses that left satisfied punters groovin' all the way home.

EVROSOC

• Henry Cornwell

Hollis are coming up and it's time to either head to Europe or kick around in Sydney on your own while everybody else does – your call. Top of your list of things to do is a) work out where you wanna go, b) bone up on European culture through an encyclopaedic understanding of Eurovision, and c) join a society to facilitate your drunken European celebrations, ruminations and salutations. Allow me and 2012 Evrosoc president Ben Soroka to help.

Q&A

First up, Evro or Euro? And why?

Our name is Evrosoc because Europe is known as Evropa in a lot of European languages, plus if we used 'Euro' it would sound like the currency and we're not really about the money.

So Europe is great – no question, but why should we join a society dedicated to it?

There a lot of culture-based societies on campus, from The Hellenic Society to The Korean Bible Study. We noticed that even though there are many clubs, they are pretty diverse and have a small range of people who might be interested. We also noticed a distinct lack of groups with a European focus, so we decided to create Evrosoc to bring European students and Europe enthusiasts together.

We're assuming you have some clues as to the best way to travel through Europe on the cheap?

Stay in hostels – it's super cheap and you meet a lot of likeminded young tourists to have a good time with. A lot of these people are Aussies too so you won't get homesick. Go for smaller hostels run by locals rather than chains, as the locals always have much better knowledge on where to go and what to do – plus they're much more fun. And scrap flying though Europe! Riding trains and buses is cheaper and you get to experience so much more.

On the subject of trains and buses, where and when does Evrosoc meet?

We have events at uni, the beach, the pub, European restaurants – pretty much anywhere that fun and a lot of drinking is to be had (this drinking can include regular Russian water). We hold regular barbecues, beach days and outings with European themes – we even went to a Russian comedy night not long ago.

Do you have to pay for membership, like joining the European Union? If so, what do proceeds go towards (ed – hopefully not the EU)?

It's $5 for Arc members and proceeds go directly into funding events for our members, keeping money available to damage members' livers. We're also famous for our Roundhouse Evrosoc parties!

Speaking of, it's the Grand Finals this weekend – who's gonna win Evrosoc this year?

Russia of course – go the grandmas!

So what are you waiting for? Go book your tickets to Evrosoc. But hurry up before they get too expensive. In the meantime, join Evrosoc, guaranteed to meet your 'Evro' need.

Fighting hundreds of years of cultural prejudice through epic roundhouse parties

BLITZ SAYS, EVROSOC SAYS:

- Which European country is the best place to go for... Hot chicks: Serbia - you'll see. Hot dudes: Russia, of course!
- Good food: Austria, especially Vienna. I gained 15 kilos in six weeks – amazing.
- Beaches: Try Bulgaria! Very cheap and lots of fun.
- Skating: Austria - Awesome ski fields, perfect powder. Not much else to ask for.
- Nature: Germany for its beautiful forests.
- Art: France or Russia. The world's two biggest museums are in these countries.
- History: Check out Istanbul. The former city of Constantinople has so much, it's incredible.
