Buenos Dias Blitzers!

When I finished my Arts degree mid 2010 I made an epic pilgrimage to Mexi-coco seeking salvation and Soi, along the way I got really sunburnt and sat on the roof of a speeding car. But that's a story for another time.

What I'm getting at is that Mexico is a fever in the blood. And this year's Foundation Day brings my two favourite things together: Mexi-coco fever and UNSW pride.

Get excited to celebrate 63 years of UNSW being the ultimate destination for smarty pants and party people. We're an eclectic crew and proud of it. Obviously the double up of celebrating Foundies then heading to Splendour on the weekend will be tricky, but we'll do our best.

Wish us luck and cya at the party hombres!

CHEESE ON TOAST PRODUCTIONS

GOSSIP GIRL, SHMOSSIP GIRL: THIS WEEK BLITZ PARTIES WITH THE CREW BEHIND YOUTUBE PHENOMENON SYD2030.

No uni experience is complete without some seedy hook-ups and a sneaky skinny-dip. But how about having three cameras filming the hook-ups and waterproof bandaids hiding your nipples?

Welcome to the exhilarating world of Cheese On Toast Productions, the creators of award-winning Gossip Girl-esque webseries, Syd2030. Cheese On Toast Productions is the brainchild of UNSW film students Alex Barnett, Suzie Smith (Media and Communications), Tatjana Marjanovic (Arts/Law) and Annika Drew (Arts/Hons), and production manager Alex Cavas (non-UNSW, but still loveable). The entirely self-funded series follows a group of ridiculously good-looking friends/frenemies studying law at the fictitious Eastern Sydney University – and UNSW students will get a kick out of recognising our own fair campus as the setting.

Marjanovic, the show's creator, director and star, explained that Syd2030 had its humble beginning as a script she wrote for class. "The story isn't new, but the context of a law school hasn't been done before and it's really interesting to be under so much pressure but at the same time party so hard – we just want to live it up... [Syd2030's] really an exaggerated reflection of my time studying law [at UNSW]," she confessed.

The reason the show works, she suggests, is that it differs from "shows written by older people who don't remember what it's like to do drugs or be young". After receiving positive feedback in class the Cheese On Toast crew hit the ground running, especially the show's producer Smith, who "had no idea what a producer was. I had to Wikipedia it!"

Smith also emphasised that Cheese On Toast Productions are especially grateful to the EMPA staff who encouraged them to enter competitions, and even went as far as to project episodes up on a big screen in a Webster lecture room. "We got really great responses from UNSW," she said.

And speaking of responses, just like yin and yang, there can be no good feedback without criticisms. Drew, Syd2030's Art Director, explained that from YouTube comments viewed, the "positive feedback definitely outweighs the bad stuff", and Smith philosophised that "haters are always gonna hate. [Syd2030's] trashy, but even if the responses are negative, the viewers are outraged enough to comment, which is awesome."

Talking of awesome, these guys are high rollers – they recently flew to the US for the LA Film, TV and Webisode Festival, where Syd2030 won the award for Best International Webseries, and Syd2030's also been selected for the 2012 International Television Festival. But success hasn't come easily; while Barnett, Syd2030's editor, joked that they used "sexual favours to get to the top", the real truth, according to Smith, is that these guys were pulling "21 to 22-hour shoots on 45 minutes sleep." Drew outlined that they "took shifts sleeping." "Thank God we had the best cast and crew."

So between launch parties and festival red carpets, we hope these guys get some sleep before planning new episodes. Marjanovic confessed that the crew's friends have already been demanding screen time in the second season, so get in contact soon and perhaps you too can get your nipples in a band aid by the cool kids from Cheese On Toast. According to Smith, the crew can often be located "at the UniBar, where all the great thinkers of UNSW are found".

Haters are always gonna hate. [Syd2030's] trashy, but even if the responses are negative, the viewers are outraged enough to comment, which is awesome.

Suzie Smith

Head to p19 for our review of the show and syd2030.com.au to watch full eps of the show on everyone's lips.

Alex Cavas, Suzie Smith, Alex Barnett, Tatjana Marjanovic and Annika Drew can't get enough of each other.

There are advantages to never leaving uni - that's one of the few things I've learned after being present for five years for UNSW Foundation Day fiestas (rounded down to the nearest five). Despite what Van Wilder leads you to believe, the process of growing old on campus is not all about glamour - you may also gain wisdom.

Maybe it's something to do with the fact that, while the university marches forward through the years and generations, the age of its students remains eternal - clustered mostly around the late teens and early 20s (and - much love to the mature age students). Sometimes it's easy to imagine that things never change on campus, that it's an ageless and cyclical organism of the same petitioning Socialists, the partying college kids (R.I.P. Besser and Goldstein), the occasional Arts students, the omnipresent Law students (what are there, like 10,000 of you?), all ignoring the same petitions, bagging booths at the Library, stamping their cards at the coffee cart and shouting rounds at Roundhouse happy hour. It's only when you've been here as long as I have (about a thousand years) that it gets easier to appreciate the change, going on endlessly, all around us.

Our Mexican amigos have a long and complicated history of invasions and inventions, but what about the coming of age story of our fair UNSW? As you don your poncho and sombrero this Mexican themed Foundation Day, take uno momento to reflect on where we came from.

• Chris Long

greatly over the years, so the 2011 birth of the Roundhouse's sophisticated mid-campus little sister, The White House has probably saved my education.

However, this level of progress has casualties. Anyone from The Kensington Colleges will agree that the destruction of Besser and Goldstein is almost as bad as the deforestation occurring in the lush region of Chiapas in Mexico. As an ex-Baxterian myself, I can attest that the colleges will be sorely missed - and not just because there are now two less excuses to wear your pyjamas to class. The arrival of the dramatically less cool 'Village' has done little to soothe the aching chasm of grief (no offence, Village People).

Of course the progression of UNSW extends beyond the irony of having two less colleges while, paradoxically, gaining twice as many places to drink. Birthdays are not (just) an excuse to get drunk; they're also a time for reflection and resolution. This Foundation Day our university turns a slick 63 (or sesenta y tres in Spanish). Compared to our crusty neighbour, the 162-year-old USyd, our UNSW is a sprightly youth bursting with vitality and ambition.

Originally a tech school, UNSW was established off the back of World War II as part of a national initiative to transition from an agricultural economy into a modern industrial society. This year some 46,000 students from 160 different countries will celebrate Foundation Day, Mexican style, with over 5,000 full-time staff across numerous campuses, including COFA and ADFA.

Get your fiesta on all day and night this Thursday, there'll be a heap of activities concentrated around the Arc Precinct and the Roundie. Because hey, we owe it to ourselves to get involved, starting with a day of —ahem, 'respectful celebration' amongst our intellectual amigos. That's —and giving a nod to the opening of a third uni bar — they'll thank us in future Foundation Days.

- Notable past Foundation Day pranks have involved the hijacking of a Moesman ferry by 'pirates', stealing an alligator from Taronga Zoo, four fights on the Library Lawn and creating a fake zebra crossing to Kingsford Blances.
- Over half of the top HSC students each year make UNSW their first preference - that means we always get the smartest, freshest to think up epic Foundation Day stunts!
- The first UNSW cohort in 1949 consisted of 46 Engineering students, and since then Engineering students have been the instigators of the most Foundation Day pranks.
- The UNSW motto, "Scientia Manu at Mente", is latin for "Knowledge by hand and mind", essential skills for executing the perfect Foudrle prank.

FOUNDATION DAY SUPER FIESTA

Happy 63rd Birthday UNSW

From Tom-Tom of the (the day) at the Arc Precinct and Apr-Tulle in a macho (at night) at the Roundhouse, kick it Mexican style.

Friends, allow us to paint a picture for you with our imagination brushes. Visualise for a second that when we all go to sleep on Wednesday night we'll wake up and magic! When Thursday morning rolls around and you rock up to UNSW for a normal day of classes, it's magic to Mexico! Get excited for appearances from Canyon, magicians and even the Spanish Armada!

Winners and Losers

Parties often end in tears when one attendee takes a competitive little too seriously. Let's keep it light when you go for glory in the burnt eating competition or maybe the frozen toilet competitor's more year bag? The peace de resistance for competitors is the Spanish Gelson Challenge in which you're invited to use DTF objects to build your best war ship in five minutes.

If you've got a whole day to fill have a bit of the Foundation Day Fresco Fun with 65 items to locate around campus in 4 hours. Head to the 8th FB page for ideas on how to register your team.

Nap Time

Need extra energy for the evening's events? Power up on a comfy deck chair in the area area of the Arc Precinct. Yes, the cool cats of the Roundhouse and the Foundation Day Coordinator really have thought of everything.

See p12 for the full lineup.

So with all that cool stuff going down, say hello to go to classes and hold a fiesta fun

La Messa

We're having our own private festival on Thursday, with 13 huge bands performing for your love including Canyon, Sticky Fingers, Cadillac, The White Line pit for our interview with the band, Frank, Alaska and the Ramo and more. Also keep a look out for the Sun Chasers who will be performing an entirely solar powered show at the Library Lawn at 1pm.

Party Tricks

Embroider your Mexican culture at the birthday party with a fun magician from the 2012 team. Arrived! Deck yourself out in a match band performing at the Arc Precinct.

Spectacular Shows

As well as the heavenly bands from all the bands and the talented show of people being tossed off the mechanical bull, get excited for performances from some of UNSW's favorite societies: Arc, Pops, Rhythmic, MJTS and DiscoSoc. Grab a snack from the Wilshire Marto food-truck 880 and sit down to catch the shows.

SPLENDOUR SIDE SHOWS

Keep it local!

Kicking yourself for not getting tix to Splendour in the Grass This Weekend? Or just CBF travelling to Byron? Either way, Blitz's got you covered.

Missing out on getting tix to Splendour isn't really the end of the world as those bad boys cost (like $350 not including accommodation), which is almost as much as you need to buy all your textbooks. Instead, let's look into spending heaps less on the specific band that you've been obsessing over, since they were featured in an ad for Apple or VW. Obviously massive acts like Lana Del Rey, Miley Cyrus and Smashing Pumpkins sold out in seconds, but we've got the deets on the smaller gigs that still that still have tickets up for grabs.

Tix

Wed 25 July @ Metro
TIX: $49 + bf from metrotheatre.com.au

We are indeed young, so set the world (and your bank account) on fire and grab some tickets to see these jokers on George St.

The Shins

Wed 25 July @ Hordern Pavilion
TIX: $63.50 + bf from ticketek.com.au

For the high rollers who still can't get past how amazing the Garden State soundtrack was there are still a few tix left for these Splendour headliners.

Metz

Thu 26 July @ The Hifi
TIX: $48 + bf from thehifi.com.au

These guys sure have a 'Sick Muse' and believe that 'everybody just wanna fall in love'. Who can resist? If you're into Yeah Yeah Yeahs crossed with The Cardigans and a splash of Garbage you'll be down for this synth girl rock sound.

Youth Lagoon

Sat 28 July @ The Factory Theatre
TIX: $37 + bf from factorytheatre.com.au

It's kind of crazy that it's just a one-man band, but go with it. The Year of Hibernation is one of the best albums we've heard in an age and you'll recognize the lovely melody of 'Afternoon' from Skype ads. That's when you know you have hipster taste, when your favourite secret song is used in a tech ad.

Electric Blues!

Tues 31 July @ Oxford Art Factory
TIX: $38.50 + BF from oxfordartfactory.com.

You'll feel like Ryan Gosling in Drive listening to these easy beats. This LA act is all class and atmosphere.

Django Django

Thurs 2 Aug @ Oxford Art Factory
TIX: $44.25 + BF from oxfordartfactory.com.

It's a 'Default' move to want to go to see these boys beat their tambourine with some nice electric beats. They're joined by The Cast Of Cheers for what should be the ultimate night of party at OAF.

WIN

For your chance to score a double pass, to see Youth Lagoon at The Factory Theatre on Saturday July 28 email blitz@arc.unsw.edu.au with 'I'm Drawing' as the subject and tell us why you're not going to Splendour.

The Shins

CHEAP A$$ SYDNEY

SO YOU THINK YOU CAN DANCE?

Terrain

18 July until 18 August
@ Sydney Opera House, Drama Theatre
Cost: $25 for students

The internationally acclaimed Bangarra Dance Theatre presents Terrain, an exploration of the relationship of Indigenous people to country and how landscape becomes a second skin. Just for us promo students the Opera House are offering 2 tickets for $40 during student rush on Tuesdays and Wednesday performances - you just have to get to the box office at 9am on the day of the show.

BONDI HIPSTERS

10am-4pm every Sunday
@ Bondi Beach Public School

Obviously nothing compares to our own Arc Flea Markets, but since 1993 Sydneysiders and tourists have been flocking en masse to pick up handmade bling, crafts, clothes from up-and-coming designers and much more at the world famous Bondi Markets. It's probs too cold for a swim after you shop, but on the plus side if you don't feel like eating any of the yummy market food there's a Maccas right across the street.

PAINT IT BLACK

Art After Hours

5-9pm every Wednesday
@ Art Gallery NSW
COST: Free

Come along and enjoy some smooth sax at Music in the Art Bar with Waralak from 5:15pm. Then you can head off and enjoy talks, tours and even a tute in origami - and hopefully you'll pay more attention to that lesson than your uni tutes. You'll also be rubbing shoulders with Sydney's elite after a long day at work, as the best way to relax on hump day is with a glass of vino and some Van Gogh.

MONORAIL... MONORAIL... MONORAIL!

Sydney Treasure Hunt on the Monorail

8am-10pm daily until 1 Oct 2012
@ Any Monorail station in the Sydney CBD
COST: $24 for a team of four

Unlike the ill-fated Monorail from The Simpsons, Sydney has a delightfully safe and fun Monorail that performs laps around the CBD. While this event was probably designed with laminitis in mind, it's a great opportunity to take a look around Sydney and a convenient excuse to have a wild ride on the Monorail.

UNSW's Foundation Day is (infamous for students' dedication to the occasion, not only by enjoying a quiet few drinks but also with some harmless mischief. Past Foundation Day pranks have involved an alligator stolen from Taronga Zoo, a three-storey tall porno projected in George St, and a 'toxic waste leak' (fluorescent brake fluid with stolen radioactive labels on the barrels) at a train station along with students who 'died' on cue. Whatever your plans this year, keep these tips in mind to stay out of trouble.

UNSW is a wet campus, meaning alcohol consumption is allowed in outdoor areas. However, while sneaking drinks into your classes might sound like fun, it's not allowed (and definitely don't try it in a Med class). Off campus, NSW law allows for public consumption of alcohol unless the area is designated alcohol-free.

Hopefully you don't plan on doing anything which would justify police attention, but it's useful for everyone to understand their rights and police powers. Technically, the only thing you have to tell police officers is your name and address. Anything else (apologies for the cliché) can be used against you. Police can also order you to leave an area if you're causing a disturbance, and can search you if they have a reasonable belief that you've committed an offence.

Above all, exercise common sense and courtesy, have a great time, and get in touch with Arc Student Support on (02) 9385 7700 or email advice@arc.unsw.edu.au as soon as possible if you get into trouble!

MAIN WALKWAY MUSOS

• Luke Letourneau

With the likes of The Presets, Jezebel and You Am I meeting and forming stellar bands during their uni years, it's easy to see that there are sick opportunities that you can take advantage of during your time at UNSW. Okay sure, your studies are important, but where else are you going to be surrounded by so many others desperately seeking an outlet to relieve stress? So with applications for the Roundhouse's UNSW Band Comp open, here are a few crucial dos and don'ts for forming the ultimate student band.

Don't...

Fill your band with your besties.
What if they're crap?

Think you're hilarious.

Novelty acts are fine, but they get exhausted - and when people get exhausted they get angry. And, well, you're not really there to anger the crowd, that's what the drunk spilling drinks everywhere is for.

Do...

Find other like-minded folk.
But not too much like your own, what if your ideas are bad? You'll need a traffic.

Know thyself!

I can already tell you, Muse is out of both your lead singer's and your guitarist's range.

[Fingers crossed] Win gracefully.

Art is not a competition; today you just happened to be the lucky one.

Lose gracefully.

Image is everything. If you don't have rock star talent, at least have rock star rage. Hulk out if you lose - people need to remember you for something.

Good luck picking your bandmates and songs. Guitar Heroes - we can't wait to see you fall up in the spotlight... (or at least busking on Main Walkway for bus money).

UNSW Band Comp Starts this Wednesday, July 25 at 6pm at the Roundhouse.

SUICIDE BLONDE

suicideblonde.tumblr.com

Suicide Blonde is one of the most reblogged tumblr pages around and it's easy to see why. The blogger is a 30-something Canadian lesbian who, with her partner (homicidalbrunette.tumblr.com) scours the net for the most interesting pics and posts that reflect their enjoyment of fashion, flair and fun.

As well as saving every second beautiful image that she posts you'll be chucking to yourself at some of her comments. Suicide Blonde is not shy about having fun with her sexuality. My favourite thing is when she post pics of same sex actors together (eg pics of True Blood's vampires Bill and Eric or Black Swan's Mia Kunis and Natalie Portman) with just the text "JUST KISS ALREADY" beneath.

I dare you not to enjoy perusing these 4000 pages of a dazzling mix of old images of Marilyn, Audrey and Liz Taylor, as well as more recent film stills, quotes and shots of young starlets living it up in Hollywood.

THE WORLD'S BEST STREET FOOD

Lonely Planet

Flicking through and seeing the gorgeous photos and recipes in The World's Best Street Food drew me back to my gap year and love of food and travel. All at once I was desperate to try all of the inviting looking recipes.

A few of the recipes have been dressed up a little too much by the good people at Lonely Planet to really capture the essence of 'street food', but then again there are no rules - except to be fast and tasty, so why not make them gourmet. They certainly taste as good as many of the top restaurants.

In The World's Best Street Food the Lonely Planet exactly captures the average traveller and their experiences yet again. This delectable book will transport you back to those first mouth-watering bites and encourage you go seek out the further wonders of street food around the world.

FAR EAST MOVEMENT

Dirty Bass

As soon as you hit play, there's the sensation that the Far East Movement themselves materialise around you and the party begins, and not just them, but the stars hip-hop mainstream to Asian pop, with whiffs of alternative. This is the track list that teleports you to the multicultural and million-dollar urban landscape that is contemporary American hip-hop.

From the moment you hear the 'Dirty Bass' drop with Tyga, you're clubbing. Then as you enjoy a bevy, Justin Bieber's coming in with 'Live My Life' and before you know it, you're back on the dance floor, showing the world 'Where The Wild Things Are' with Crystal Kay (damn, she's an East-meets-West movement herself).

Featured artists Pitbull, Kay and Cassie are in the crew that walks you home with familiar tunes as hints of RnB filter through the sunset alleyways. At street-end, 'Rocketeer' Ryan Tedder and Dev flying Like A G6 are waiting, wings open, to welcome you home with easy beats.

SYD2030

Web Series

It Girl returns from a mysterious year abroad to find that her old life has completely turned upside down. Sound familiar? You're probably thinking that this is the main plot of series one of Gossip Girl. There is even a Greek Australian equivalent of Chuck Bass in the form of Leo Cassevetes - who I daresay may be even more delectable than Ed Westwick.

In fact, it's the plot of a new Australian web series that's taken the cyber world by storm - SYD2030. Though its beginning was a little too close to Gossip Girl for my liking, this YouTube phenomenon has definitely come into its own. Written, co-directed and starring UNSW student, Tatjana Marjanovic as Serena van der Woodsen-esque Bridget Knox, SYD2030 captures the elite life of Eastern Suburbs law students to a tee.

Also kudos to the creators of SYD2030, Cheese on Toast Productions, who won "Best International Webseries" in the LA Film, TV and Webisode Festival earlier this year. They've taken advantage of the social media age we live in and have done a brilliant job of getting their series out there - or maybe that's just by overanalysing everything as usual. While the acting is not always believable, you gotta give credit to a series that's written, directed and produced by a small group of university twenty-somethings, many of whom are fresh out of living SYD2030's popularity may be due to the fact that it offers something Australian to the hole in the late teen early 20s age group. This is not another Home and Away or Neighbours people (thank goodness).

Any previous skepticism about SYD2030's quality has been swiftly squashed. This web series is pretty damn addictive.

MEET: The Khanz

facebook.com/thekhanzmusic

theKhanz.com.au

BAND MEMBERS:

Thembisa Thompson - Music Teacher

Harrison Hunt - Media and Communications, Macquarie

Nick Gibson - Economics, UNSW

Katrina Maskell - NIDA

HAILING FROM: Sydney

RELEASES:

'Natural Instinct' EP

'Prescription Culture' Single

and Video: youtube.com/watch?v=RuFUZ5YnJt8

Q&A WITH THE BAND

How did you guys all meet?

Gibson: I knew Thembisa and Harrison from high school. I hadn't seen them in years, then bumped into Thembisa's dad who told me the guys were looking for a bass player.

Maskell: Meeting the boys was a total fluke! A friend of mine met a friend of theirs at a party then we all became buddies and within a year I was part of the band!

The best thing about being in a young band is...

Gibson: Being young helps us put a lot of energy and time into music; we're constantly learning more about performing and the music industry.

Thompson: This is what we want to do so starting young is definitely essential. Performing in front of people is so much fun, especially when everyone's dancing and having a great time.

What's it like trying to juggle student life with a musical career?

Gibson: It can be pretty challenging especially with work and keeping up with the amount of practice we do, but it's just about finding a balance, just like any other uni student.

Maskell: Most of us have actually deferred uni for part of this year. I was hoping to continue at NIDA but the band is pretty demanding, not to mention that we all have jobs to finance the band so it's hard to balance.

Finish this sentence: In 10 years The Khanz will be...

Maskell: Hopefully entertaining people all around the world!

Gibson: Playing with U2 and hopefully still loving every minute of it.

Q&A THE ANIMATION SOCIETY

Still crying about the old man in Up? Or is Aussie Academy Award-winning Harvey Crumpet more your cup o' tea? This week Blitz got a rough outline of the origins of UNSW's Animation Society from founder and director, Mohimi Herse.

After winning the "Bruce Petty Encouragement Award" at last year's UNSW-run We Heart Animation Festival, Mohimi Herse (Media and Production) - wanting an outlet to explore animation further - decided to form The Animation Society.

"I won the award and realised there was no further ground at UNSW to get involved with animation," said Herse. "I wanted to be able to do [a project] more than once every other semester."

So Herse gathered a group of her close friends and collaborators together to form their very own animation group at UNSW. "I'm the director [of the society], and I find the ideas and then put them to the group to see who's interested in getting involved in the projects," said Herse. And this is where the animated magic happens: "People come together and there are so many different perspectives on the same concepts."

It's an approach that appears to be serving them well, as the Animation Society have already lined up two impressive gigs; one within UNSW for Artsweek in Week 5, as well as the opportunity to pitch a music video concept for Melbourne folk-outfit, Canvas. Herse explained that, while excited for both projects, the music video pitch is especially amazing because "it's the real world where we're dealing with real clients".

By getting practice creating high quality animations, the Animation Society members have the opportunity to add professional level work to their portfolios and showreels.

CLUB LOVER: EMILY HOGAN FROM CHEERSOC 5th year Bachelor of Bioinformatics/Science

So what kind of cheerleader are you? I'm in the Pom and Stunt teams. Pom is a mixture of jumps, cheer motions and jazz style dancing. In the stunt team I'm a Main Base, so when we're throwing girls up in the air, I'm the one who controls the stunt. But apart from elite stunting I also do jumps, tumbling and a little bit of dance.

You're dripping in medals dude, how many comps have you entered?

Yeah, I've competed in 4 or 5 a year, for the last 5 years. It's a great bonding experience and you get a trophy for the whole team if you win. Our first place trophies for nationals last year were more than half my height!

What's your favourite thing about being in Cheersoc?

Everyone becomes a family in Cheersoc; some of the things we do are really hard or could potentially be dangerous so we have to trust each other, and everyone's very supportive.
