Welcome

We're back – and looking better than ever!

You might have noticed Blitz had a fancy facelift over the break and I'm gonna throw all modesty out the window and say that we look smoking hot. Foxy even. Session 2 is jam-packed with parties and events and we'll be here to give you all the deets plus a few other tasty tit-bits to get you through the week. Check out the definitive guide to What's On at uni on page 11 and some sweet student-priced events around Sydney on page 14. But enough from me, it's about damn time you met the rest of the team.

Mary is a third year student who is obsessed with food. When she was two, her parents found her eating crayons instead of colouring in. Since then she has ditched the crayon addiction and now spends her days dreaming about how to make the perfect chocolate mouse. At Blitz, she spends her time campaigning for her editor to give her a food column. (Make me cookies first, and then we'll talk – Ed.)

Andrew was born in the Russian Antarctic research station of Komolomskaya. Abandoned by the Soviets when it was closed, he was subsequently raised by whales, and is still known to engage in the occasional bout of whaling. Settling in Sydney several years ago, during his annual migratory passage north, he learnt English from bus timetables to UNSW. At Blitz, his penchant is for music and film, though he enjoys writing on just about anything.

Andrew Blackie
Blitz Reporter

True to her title of Designer, Serana is all about pictures over words, making Blitz look super-sweet every single week. She's the only one on the team allowed to use a Mac and uses terms like “kerning” and “glyphs”. Filling out other designer stereotypes, she adds a touch of glamour to the office and looks good in all-black because, let's be honest, she'd look good wearing just a crayon addiction.

Your new album There Is A Way has just been released, who were your influences when recording?

We managed to record it with (nu-metal producer) Ross Robinson, who has made a lot of amazing records over the years with Slipknot, Korn, Blood Brothers and At the Drive-In. We wanted to capture a lot of the energy we could hear on those records; (Ross) really pushed us to be the most raucous we could!

Your bandmate John had a pretty nasty fall off stage at the Annandale in 2009, snapping both bones in his arm. How did you react when it happened?

I heard him stop singing and I got this twinge that something was wrong; so we stopped the music and took it from there.

At the time, we thought: ‘Oh no, John’s going to have to leave the band but it brought us together and made us stronger in the end.

Are you worried about playing the Annandale again?

Any unfinished business?

(Laugh) Yeah, definitely - when we got offered to play there: we were like ‘Ohh, should we?’

and kind of left it up to John to decide.

With the slightly weird yet alluring underlying tone of Schoolgirls V Dinosaurs firing up this year’s Start of Session Party, you have official permission to get all Jurassic on it while partying it up in your old school uniform if the urge demands (and don’t pretend you haven’t secretly been fantasising about such things).

To help you get in the mood and fire up the imagination for a forgettable unforgettable party (and fight off the schoolgirls, boys) – you can thank us after.

What do you eat?
- Meat. You will eat any part of the animal– ribs, buttocks, liver, brain, you name it.
- You like to mix it up – steak or fish and a bit of salad on the side
- Strictly fruit and veggies
- Seafood! Fish, crab, mussels – heck, you’ll even eat plankton if it’s available
- Food? You’re a poor, jobless uni student – enough said.

It’s the last day of department store sales. You:
- Are the first to storm into the store, pushing other customers to the side, abusing sales assistants, asking for the manager and demanding a discount even though the item is not faulty;
- Swear at the sales assistant for ignoring you and decide to hang in the food court with your mates;
- Find the nearest chair and wait for your friends or significant other to finish browsing;
- Are the first to walk into the store and hunt for the petites sizes;
- Stay home and watch TV instead.

Your daily exercise routine involves:
- Going to the gym three times a day, boxing, soccer and any rough sport;
- Study – it’s important to exercise the mind;
- Yoga and Pilates;
- Reaching for the TV remote during commercial breaks.

You wish you:
- Were stronger;
- Were smarter;
- Were taller;
- Could fly;
- Could sleep and do nothing all day.

Your study schedule involves:
- Reading up on protein shakes and researching the bloody battles of history;
- Waking up, doing your readings, attending your lectures, going home and reading over your notes before you go to sleep;
- Making a list of unfinished readings you promised you would do weeks ago;
- Checking how many courses you have lined up for summer school;
- Stealing notes from HD students.

Whether you’re a voracious carnivore or a gentle giant, surely schoolgirls are no match for your mighty reptilian stylings? Though if Kick Ass is anything to go by, little girls can be lethal – only one way to find out – get to the Start of Session Party at the Roundhouse this Thursday for the ultimate showdown.

HARRY WYNTER’S WONDERLAND
AN APTLY NAMED WRITER’S JOURNEY TO THE SKI FIELDS

With my semester all wrapped up, the winter solstice just passed and blizzards covering Mt Kosciusko, my benevolent Blitz editor decided to send me skiing for the weekend to try out Mojosnow’s new deluxe package – basically a cheap way for backpackers and students to spend a weekend at the snow. What a B. Here’s how it went down:

FRIDAY

6pm The bus sets off and we go through basic introductions. Tour guides Ronny and Jake are cheeky and affable. The group is mostly international students and local snow-enthusiasts, with the odd German thrown in the mix.

Midnight Pick up our gear from Monstar Ski Hire. Of the 65 on tour, 63 are snowboarding – what a bunch of schlubs.

1am Bank down at The Station Lodge; the heating isn’t working, so I’m sleeping in my ski gear.

SATURDAY

6.30am Greasy buffet breakfast; the eggs are powdered, but the sausages are good.

9am Head up the mountain. There’s fresh snow and conditions are perfect. No wind, a mild 0°C and not a cloud in the sky. My hired board isn’t great, but I’m looking forward to ripping some fresh tracks.

9.30am Cruise down the first run on my face – there’s snow in my pants and it feels good. I’m only here for two days so there’s no option but to go hard.

1pm Take a break for soup and cider. The ghost gums look like twisted fingers protruding from the snow.

4pm Return to the bus where Jake is waiting with cold beers. Legend.

5pm Sunset over Lake Jindabyne is damn pretty (get it? It’s a dam!). Quick stop at a bottle shop as rumour of a party spreads.

7pm Drinks then dinner. The food is good, but I’m so hungry I barely notice. Head to the pub.

10pm Grandpa can’t keep his eyes open. For all the talk of a wild night, I’m fast asleep before 10.30pm.

UNSW Welcome Back Day

Welcome Back Day will ease you back into uni after a lazy winter, electric-blanket filled break – grab some mates and check out what will be happening in semester 2, before you get back into study mode.

Not Too Late to Go Clubbing

Remember these clubs and societies you thought about going way back in semester 1? They’re back, but with bigger, better stalls to catch you up on new events and activities – so you’ll no longer have an excuse to feel like you’re missing out.

Parklife @ UNSW

If you thought that being greeted with a mass of flying money wasn’t enough, don’t miss the Parklife DJs playing the big stage at the Red Centre – put it this way, you won’t be regretting getting out of bed and giving up that electric blanket.

The Winter Festival Heats Up the City

Having spent some time in Europe last December, I realised; those Europeans really know how to do winter. When the temperature starts falling and the snow starts accumulating, tucked away in the corner of every continental city is a Christmas market. They provide warm food, gifts, sweets and ornamented trees, plus a tremendously congenial and communal atmosphere. In short, everything you associate with the Christmas season. And we wonder why they all laugh when we say we have a ‘hot Christmas’.

Which brings us to the Sydney Winter Festival - new in its third year - which is having a crack at transposing some of that European spirit down under. The highlight of this year’s program is a huge outdoor ice rink beneath St. Mary’s Cathedral, with a line-up of figure-skating performances and the ‘Ice BINGO’ relay race challenge (sponsored by Ski hut and lipton Chai latte lodge). After a spin on the ice, the Alpine Ski hut and lipton Chai latte lodge is free before 4pm on Wednesdays. Lucky you, the Winter Fest has a ‘cheapie’ deal - skate hire (BYO or rent) is cheaper than the return fare to Europe.

WHERE? Cathedral Square
WHEN? July 22 - August 14
HOW? Tic available from winterfestival.com.au BY0 or rent skates VERDICT? A hybrid of heartwarming and tack, but certainly cheaper than the return fare to Europe.
COST? Entry from $15

WHERE? To get the most out of the Festival, be sure to check out the Winterfest Hub, located in the heart of the inner Xanadu at Sk80s Discothèque.

Find as many words as you can in the squares. Each word must be at least four letters long and include the middle letter, plurals allowed. Each letter can only be used once.

Find a word of the week: Quiddity – weird-little, noun, the essence, nature, or distinctive peculiarity of a thing. From the Latin quidites meaning ‘essence’. Not to be confused with the fictional sport of Quidditch. Use it in a sentence: “He was attracted to her quirks and quiddities, the way she smiled when she laughed was endearing.”

Welcome back! If you thought last semester was jam packed full of fun, this next one will blow-your-mind!

What better way to say welcome back than with Welcome Back Day – how very appropriate. Come down to the University Walk and check out all the exciting club and volunteer opportunities that Arc has on offer as well as live performances, BBQs and shenanigans galore, as well as the chance to meet the one and only, me!

If you’re looking to get more involved in student life and keep building that resume this is the perfect way to kick-start your semester. Not only is there the chance to enlist in the ever popular, extremely worthwhile and always expanding Volunteer Army (now with over 500 recruits), but you can also be a part of the incredibly rewarding Shack Tutoring program or revel in free stuff with the Stationary Re-Use Centre.

So everyone get out there, get involved and stay posted for my weekly updates because, as you already know, I’m in the gnome.

GO CLUBBING WITH FOOTYSOC

Got feet? Got balls? Then you’re gonna love FootySoc. UNSW’s newest club have certainly hit the ground running – its membership soared from a mere 2 to a whopping 370 just two weeks after forming. Blitz scored a few sacred minutes with FootySoc’s president, Daniel Suwito.

You’re a new society on campus; what’s your game plan?

We had this idea of getting football fans of any kind to come together, go to games together and participate in social events; we don’t necessarily play, we’re just the fans.

Football is internationally popular – what’s your background?

I’m originally from Indonesia – I was born here, but grew up there. I’m not good at playing football, but I do love all the different codes and watching them; that was partly my motivation in creating this club … we’re culturally diverse and we’re for everyone.

And I understand you have a launch party coming up? Tell us more...

It’s this Friday, July 22, a trivia night in the Club Bar from 4-6pm, followed by us all going to the NRL game together.

FOOTY FACTS

1. The offside rule in rugby is relatively straightforward, the offside rule in soccer is much more baffling.
2. Aussie Rules was created to keep cricketers fit during winter.
3. FootySoc may be inclusive of all the codes, but the soccer ‘V’ football debate still rages – check out Monty Python’s John Cleese football rant on our Face.

NEW IN TOWN

HOSTED BY THE NATIONAL ART SCHOOL GALLERY, DARLINGHURST
Until Aug 24
The MCA may have closed their doors for renovations, but that hasn’t stopped them from bringing you the best in contemporary art. Celebrating the long-standing cultural exchange between Australia and Korea, this exhibition encompasses a staggering range of artists working in a variety of media, including sculpture and installation—a cross-cultural experience that’s well worth a look.
Cost: Free

ALSO ON SHOW

The Poetry of Drawing: Pre–Raphaelite designs, studies and watercolours
ART GALLERY OF NSW
Until Sep 4
While perhaps not as radical as Warhol or the YBA’s, the Pre–Raphaelite Brotherhood were pretty bad ass artists for their time. In 1848, these young lads set out to change the purpose and nature of art to a practice of beauty and sincerity. Explore the creative processes of big names like Dante Gabriel Rossetti and John Everett. Millais through a series of beautifully rendered drawings and sketches.
Cost: $10/$8

— THERE IS A WAY, DANANANAYKROYD

A SEPARATION
(IRAN, 2011)
DIRECTED BY ASGHAR FARHADI

9/10

The Sydney Film Festival was bursting with great films this year, from Tran Anh Hung’s soaringly visual Norwegian Wood to Julie Leigh’s home-grown, hypnotic and polarising Sleeping Beauty. But in my mind, the jury could not have improved upon their choice to award A Separation the grand prize. This Iranian film is bold, boundary-pushing and as its story unravels you at watching, nap! I could hear the cinema collectively holding its breath.

To say that the film is about the divorce of a husband and wife is reductive; onto the cinema collectively holding its breath.

THERE IS A WAY

DANANANAYKROYD

7/10

The opening tones of Danananaykroyd’s There Is A Way sound innocent enough. In fact they deliver just the right combination of familiar rock and indie freshness needed to let you guard down, before pouncing you in the face with a six-man-deep wall of sound.

Overdriven guitars are high overhead in sublime harmonies, then disintegrate into distorted riffing and storms of vocals that range from screaming to spoken word and everything between. Just when you think you’ve got them placed, the machine-gun drumming and synchronized shouting shifts effortlessly again into a disturbingly catchy pop chorus.

The six-piece have referred to this unpredictable patchwork-monster of a sound as ‘Fight Pop’ and its unlikely combinations will keep you in a state of confused suspense as the album hurtles down the knife-edge between melody and mayhem. Depending on your prejudices, this whirrwind of playful anthems will grow on you or be too much for you. Either way, you’ll find it captivating.

TRANSFORMERS 3: DARK OF THE MOON
DIRECTED BY MICHAEL BAY
STARRING SHIA LABEOUF

6/10

Transformers 3 is 2½ hours of pure action with impressive special effects and worthy 3D, but it portrays human beings as annoying and brainless creatures. Michael Bay will tell you that Sam Witwicky (Shia LaBeouf) is the human element that anchors this gigantic franchise, but in truth there is no anchor and Sam is more a cartoonish figure that screams occasionally - along with every other character.

Whilst looking for a job after graduation, Sam discovers information (rather illogically) about a spaceship that crashed on the moon in the 1960s, which holds the key to the evil Decepticons taking over Earth. Cue Autobots to band together and save the human race once again, along with a whole pile of clichés and total irrationality.

Having said all this, Transformers is at least afoot about its intentions and doesn’t pretend to be anything else. Bay produces an entertaining — enough summer blockbuster, with some bizarre cameos (in particular John Malkovich) and cool explosions. But what, I can’t figure out; is why there needs to be another one - haven’t we seen it all before?

ORANGES & SUNSHINE
DIRECTED BY JIM LOACH
STARRING EMILY WATSON, HUGO WEAVING & DAVID WENHAM

7/10

Oranges & Sunshine covers the true story of a social worker who, in the 1980s, uncovered the scandal of forced child migration from England to Australia. Parents were often not informed and they would never see their child again and many of the deportees were subjected to horific abuse.

Following official apologies from both sides of government, the outcome of the film is already known - what’s important is how it handles the details. Debut director Jim Loach has little interest in surging melodrama and the result is a measured work that feels raggedy and honest, dividing its time between austere British locations and sunny Australian vistas.

Emily Watson is in fine form as the dedicated Margaret Humphreys, while Hugo Weaving and David Wenham capture the psychological delicacy and childlike reticence of the victims, reminding us what a pleasure it is to see these two Australian actors in smaller-scale productions. This is a film that some will find too restrained, but it tells a powerful story which Loach allows it to speak for itself.

Busy winter break?

Extremely busy – piles of marking, thesis reading, assessing applications… people think we get a break, but really we never do.

What's your teaching mantra?

To instill a curiosity and a hunger for knowledge.

If you could be a dinosaur, which would you be?

I don’t wanna be a dinosaur, I’d like to be more forward-looking and something very modernistic.

What did you get up to over the break?

I’ve got a four-month-old baby, so I spent most of my time with her.

How is it seeing students in poor academic standing?

Better for me than it is for them.

Tell us your mantra?

Chupa Chups and tissues – it works more than you think!

What have you been up to over winter break?

I’ve been on sabbatical study leave for six months at Sydney University.

If you could be a dinosaur, which would you be?

One of the big friendly ones that eat grass – brontosaurus, that’s my kind of dinosaur.

Do you have a teaching mantra you’d like to share?

Teaching with a warm heart – that’s what the Dalai Lama says.
