welcome

Antonia Shuttleworth
Blitz Editor
blitzeditor@arc.unsw.edu.au

Welcome back kids. It's Week 7, the defining week of semester 1, and the question is, are you a (wo)man or a mouse? Come on Eileen, no more pretending you're at TAFE or just biding your time until Ryan Gosling comes to save you from this hell. You're at uni baby and it's Week 7, so stop bitching out and do some work dagnabbit.

You've had your little week off; chosen whether to avoid your assignments or get ahead with them and (hopefully) slept in every day. Now, some might say it's time to pack your party-self away and finally remove the plastic wrapping from your textbooks, but I say it's time to bust out your time management skills. Our boy Jake's supplied a few study tips to help those too addicted to Facebook (p17), and, if you do get some work done, reward yourself by entering our comp to win tix to see Henry's BFF Rhys Nicholson at the Sydney Comedy Festival (p8).

Whatever you decide to do, I'm glad you're back and I hope we're never apart again.

In some ways, the mid-sem break is the worst thing ever.

You don't want to roll out of bed or sit in that tute – instead you're thinking about the week and a bit that's gone by where you've worked hard and played hard – or, in my case, just played hard. Sometimes you start questioning why you're even at uni.

I'm here to tell you that these are all normal thoughts to have. Arc is here to help you get off Struggle Street and back on your path to greatness. You can grab some friends and debrief over your break at the Roundie or The White House, do some club activities or see one of our people in Student Support about any issues you're having with your assessments... The point is, part of creating the best uni experience is about giving you the support you need to get through those last few weeks of semester. And with Arc, you'll love every minute of it.

a quickie with CHILDREN COLLIDE'S HEATH CRAWLEY

• Jacob Burkett

Melbourne act Children Collide have returned to Australia's musical limelight with the highly anticipated release of their third album, Monument. The band's currently touring the nation, however, between shows, bassist Heath Crawley was able to chat to Blitz about the new record, and he didn't shy away from filling us in on drummer Ryan Caesar's decision to leave the band.

First up, we heard about Ryan. Was his decision to leave something you saw coming?

I guess it's like any relationship really; in a way it had been brewing for the entirety of our band being together. The actual decision was made quite quickly - I guess it just happened. Ryan's staying for the tour, so we'll be looking for a replacement after that.

How did the band originally come together?

I'd just started uni when I met Johnny [Children Collide's lead singer]. I was studying Event Management and uni was getting a little bit more fun than studious, so I decided I'd be getting out of it soon. Then I randomly met Johnny in a lecture; I thought he was someone else, so I went to go talk to him and then realised I had the wrong person. Before we knew it we'd organised a road trip and decided to start a band.

So suppose you hadn't mistaken Johnny for someone else that day, where would you be now? An event manager perhaps?

Oh hell no! That's tough to answer because the music has just become so involved in my life, but I think I'd be a struggling poet at home, eating Weet-Bix. I guess Johnny would still be living with his mum...

Instead, your first album was recorded in LA, with world-renowned producer Dave Sardy [who has also worked with Red Hot Chili Peppers, The Rolling Stones and Jay Z]. You guys decided to record Monument in Melbourne with a local producer, what brought about the change?

We'd experienced recording overseas, so this time round we knew that we were more than capable of recording locally. Our tour manager also produced half of our second record so we knew we could trust him. It's good work with someone who you can tell to piss off and he can tell you to piss off. And it was great to be able to ride my bike down to the studio, work on the album, and then go hang out with friends afterwards.

So is touring more exciting after releasing a new album?

Definitely! This tour is about representing recent single 'Sword To A Gunfight', but basically it's almost a bon voyage to a lot of our older songs that we probably won't be playing so often in the future. It's almost like the last of the old Children Collide. We'll be touring again at the end of the year and those shows will be all about our new album.

So there you have it guys, the person sitting beside you in your next tute might be the person who changes your life - is that a good incentive to go to class or what? Monument will be released on the 20th April however Blitz has already had a sneaky listen. Head to p18 for our review.

It's good work with someone who you can tell to piss off and he can tell you to piss off.

THE MAD WORLD OF RHYS NICHOLSON

• Henry Cornwell

Mid-sessions are due, mid-sem break is behind you. The memory of summer is nearly eighteen months old and it's only gonna get colder. Baby you need cheering up!

I was also the stereotypical show-off, hungry for attention. All of those things have manifested themselves into the ball of fear you see now.

Over the next month the Sydney Comedy Festival will provide a laugh to slake your every uni woe. Blitz caught up with the dark horse of this year's line-up, Newcastle's up-and-coming bundle of laughs, Rhys Nicholson.

His last gig at the Roundhouse was a hit and since then he's only grown more hilarious. Over the phone, we bonded over a mutual love of cock and comedy. Here's how it went:

We're all getting pretty excited about the Sydney Comedy Festival!

Well there's a great line-up this year which should be super exciting. For me it's all getting fucking terrifying.

Are you really nervous or are you just saying that?

I don't know! It's about this time you start to go, "oh right, so this can be a job." A lot of comedians get into it because we can't handle a real day job. Then suddenly it becomes a real job, which is good – it means that I can live on it. But it's more just the idea of going to Melbourne [for the Melbourne Comedy Festival], where people can be very harsh. Suddenly I'm in a position where I could be exposed to some really scathing reviews.

So have you had to make many sacrifices to turn comedy into a real job?

No, I started when I was fifteen or sixteen, I never wanted to go to uni or sit in an office for the rest of my life. I did amateur theatre and because I couldn't ever remember my lines I'd make them up. Then that got me interested in writing and trying to make people laugh. I was also the stereotypical show-off, hungry for attention. All of those things have manifested themselves into the ball of fear you see now. When I got into comedy I realised it was something that I could possibly try and 'do'. So when I turned 18, I just did that. Then I moved to Sydney and started whoring myself out for gigs.

And would you advise the same to any other 15 year old who thinks he's funny?

Not every one of them. None of the good comedians I know think that they're funny. Good comedians hate themselves and that's what makes them fun on stage.

Is that the secret to good comedy?

Definitely. My solo show's all about how fucked everything is, whether it be my own life or – well, it's mostly my own life. I'm looking for topics that comedians haven't touched before and that often takes me to a deeper message – even if it is in the context of a cock joke.

Do you ever worry about penis jokes being seen or viewed by someone out of context?

Yeah, a guy once came up to me after a show where I'd had a line about how gay people don't feel love. Obviously I meant that ironically, but he said, "it's good that you guys understand that you don't feel love." But what I'm trying to do is make more than just a joke about gay people and I try to differentiate myself from gay comedians. I don't do celebrities and I'm not bitchy in my act. By being harsh and graphic on stage and pushing gay sex into people's faces I show that we're people and not cartoon characters.

And cock jokes are pretty classic male humour...

Exactly. I tend to do better at bogan pubs than I do at classy places. And gay audiences tend to hate me. I'm a gay bogan, essentially. And I wear it with pride.

Good to know that every time I thought I was being funny, I wasn't funny. Rhys brought his bag of cock jokes to UNSW last year for an amazing show, and for those craving another taste they can catch him in the act as part of the Sydney Comedy Festival.

COOKBOOK CORNER

Can't wait for the Arc Student Cookbook to be released? While you wait, here are a few last sustainable eating tips from our friendly Cookbook Coordinator.

The issue: These days food is covered in all kinds of bright and exciting packaging. Sandwiches wrapped in plastic, coffee in paper cups, choc packets in other packets! Food packaging has become a complicated marketing product and ends up in landfill or in our oceans.

The solution: Well people it is time to get your alliteration on, yes we are bringing back the 3 x R's Reduce, Reuse and Recycle!

1. Reduce: Buy food in bulk and use daily containers rather than lots of individual packets. Like those adorable red sultana packets? Say goodbye!

2. Recycle: With clear labels, housemate training and heaps of practice you will get this down in no time.

3. Reuse: Take your reusable bags on your shopping trip and invest in a 'Keep-cup' so you and your local barista reduce your coffee cup impact.

• Lucy Murrie

Class Clowns

If you've ever told a joke in class, chances are it wasn't funny. Occasionally though, people are funny when they intend to be. We call them 'comedians,' and we even have some here at UNSW.

Our prime export (though they're not really an export because I don't think they perform together outside UNSW) is a group called Shitty Pelican. Their main game is sketch comedy, improv and stand-up, and if you like what you see, get in touch and you can get involved – it's open to everybody.

But if you don't like what you see, don't lament, we're all about different types of comedy this week. All over Sydney the world's most intentionally hilarious funny people will be getting together for free, cheap and expensive gigs (including Arc's own Michael Hing). Hopefully if you study them close enough you may one day emulate their humour. In the mean time, here are some handy tips:

CHOOSE YOUR CROWD.

Dead baby jokes, for instance, never go down well at a baby's funeral.

NEVER MAKE JOKES ABOUT SOMEBODY WITTIER THAN YOU.

It will backfire.

JOKES ABOUT MINORITIES AND WOMEN

Completely off-limits if you're not part of a minority, or a woman. Otherwise, it's a free-for-all, just stick to your own minority group. Everybody laughs at gays who make gay jokes and Asians who make Asian jokes. Even if they're not funny, everybody wants to seem culturally in-tune.

If you prefer to watch, you can catch the Shitty Pelican kids this and every Monday in the Roundhouse Club Bar at 6.30pm.

BETTER THAN STUDYING: WHAT'S ON UNSW

LIME CORDIALE @THE ROUNDHOUSE

Time to quench your thirst for good music

Feel like you've been through the wringer in your tutes this week? Come soak up the chilled beats of Lime Cordiale at the Roundhouse this Thursday.

They're a young band from the Northern Beaches on the way to big things. It all started when the boys won a Radar Music 'Unsigned Band of the Month' comp last year. They then drove the crowd wild during Oktoberfest last year and again at O-Fest during O-Week this year.

Lime Cordiale have got their epic first EP coming out at the end of May, so be sure to catch them at the Roundie while you have the chance!

The cool kids from the Roundhouse have organised for a heap of upcoming hipster bands to appear at the BeerGarden over the next month, including I Know Leopard, Glass Towers and Winter People.

Game on, pimps!

Do you have incredibly bulging muscles...in your fingers? Have you ever saved a maiden, a village or even a world? Yeah, you're a gamer.

This weekend the Australian Cyber League are taking over the Roundhouse for a battle to the death – or at least your cyber-death. Compete in everything from Starcraft 2, Halo Reach, Modern Warfare 3, or even Fifa 12. ACL is also a chance to have a go at the new Gears of War 3.

This is a chance to compete against the best gamers in Australia, and catch up with friends who you most often chat to online or over head sets.

CREAMFIELDS

The creamiest festival in the world!

Headlining Creamfields this year is The Man himself, world number 1 DJ, Mr David Guetta.

You know those times when you're on Youtube and you wonder, "Who's that creepy guy lurking in the background behind Kelly Rowland?" Yeah it's David Guetta. He exploded onto the scene with Kid Cudi singing about "all the crazy shit they did last night" in 'Memories.' More recently he's had people losing their minds to 'Who's that Girl', 'Sexy Bitch', 'I Gotta Feeling' and 'When Love Takes Over,' among other hits.

As well as the big guy himself, Creamfields Australia have organised their best line-up so far featuring Above & Beyond, Dirty South, Alesso, Giuseppe Ottaviani and heaps more amazing acts.

This isn't your standard steroid monkey and fluoro bikini infested festival - Creamfields is not for the faint hearted. Grab a ticket if you want to see the hottest DJs around right now, do your best dougie and dance like there's no tomorrow.

How can you get involved in the 2012 PwC Student Experience Award?

What do you value? ...

The PwC Student Experience Award recognises students from all degree backgrounds who are achieving excellence in their work while maintaining a balanced life. The winners will receive an all-expenses paid trip to Sydney for the national award ceremony with our Australian CEO. The prize package includes a Sydney Harbour Bridge climb, financial assistance towards the course or cause of your choice and a professional development package designed to assist you with preparing for the workforce, regardless of which career you would like to pursue.

How to apply

Tell us in 200 words or less how you achieve excellence in your work while maintaining a balanced life. The award is open to students from all degree disciplines who have at least one year of study remaining.

Entries will open on Monday
13 February 2012 and close on Sunday 29 April 2012.

Apply today.

LAME WAYS TO HAVE SPENT THE BREAK

RIP mid-semester break. If this is the lameness you got up to last week... maybe keep it to yourself.

Studying. The break is a time to reward yourselves kids! People who are the least lame often take this opportunity to burn the notes they've made so far in a spiritual fire ceremony. It creates warmth and attracts animal friends. Hint: Law textbooks make the best kindling.

Crying over poor results. Come on now, you've got plenty of time to make up for the essay that you wrote on the bus and handed in four days late. Everyone knows that the final assessment is all that matters.

Working full time. Live a little my compatriots! Before you know it you'll be over at Randwick Racecourse doing your finals, so make sure you make the most of your uni holidays. Flippin' burgers won't excite you like bungee jumping will.

Waking up early. This is possibly the worst thing that you have done over the break. Smart people turn off all electrical devices, cover up windows, and sleep their little hearts out. If it isn't after midday when you wake - well then you just carry on sleeping. You've earned it trooper!

Becoming a Methyphobian. That's right. If you suffer from Methyphobia, you fear alcohol. Deciding to become one of these people over the holidays wouldn't have been the smartest move you've ever made. How else are you going to forget everything you've learnt these six weeks?!

college Obituary RIP

Basser College 1959-2012
Goldstein College 1964-2012

In the midst of all of this hilarity, we must pay our respects to two of UNSW's finest colleges, Basser and Goldstein, who have died tragically in an incident involving an unnamed demolition team. Eye witnesses say the colleges "didn't stand a chance" against the demolition, carried out in broad daylight on the north side of campus for the past few weeks.

Basser and Goldstein, as two thirds of The Kensington Colleges, were popular and well-liked members of the UNSW community. They provided homes to tens of thousands of students, many of whom married, had children, and then sent their children to the colleges to continue the family tradition.

Memories of the college will live on through the vast network of ex-residents, and reminisced about both in Facebook statuses, and over a beverage or two at The Rege. From pram racing to jelly wrestling, formal dinners to Maccas eat offs, snog trees to HDs, hipster COFA kids to obsessive mining engineers, the colleges were a diverse and thriving little eco-system.

The past and present residents of the colleges are a large, slightly incestuous family, and are mourning the loss of Basser and Goldstein greatly. While UNO, 2NO, Balc Town, The Bronx, The Bridge and other geographical areas of the colleges are no longer with us, the friendships made, the college jerseys and the not-quite-right smell of the dining hall will stay with us forever.

Basser and Goldstein colleges are survived by their younger sibling, Baxter College. All three of the Kensington Colleges will be replaced by big, new, shiny colleges opening in 2014.

study guide

WE'RE NOT JUST A WHAT'S ON GUIDE. WITH ASSIGNMENTS AND EXAMS AROUND THE CORNER, WHO BETTER TO TURN TO FOR INSPIRATION AND STUDY SECRETS THAN YOUR FAVOURITE SCHOLARLY UNIVERSITY MAGAZINE?

STEP 1 - ELIMINATE THE ZUCKERBERG

What distracts you more than anything from studying? If you don't know the answer to this one, then I'll assume you're great at studying, and reading this article may just not help you at all. For those in struggletown, you know I'm talking about Mark Zuckerberg's deathly creation, Facebook. You're logged in right now aren't you? Pathetic!

If you want to achieve total focus, you'll have to clear your head of thoughts of "ooh I wonder if anyone liked my status yet?" How does one do this? Get a friend to change your password. Don't trust your friends with your FB password because last time they changed your display picture to a naked body shot of Mr T? Get your mum, or even your grandma to change it for you. That simple procedure right there is the difference between a credit and a distinction, but I'll go on...

STEP 2 - GOAL, GOAL, GOAL!

Motivation will help you achieve the unachievable. But how do you motivate yourself to do something as boring as study? Elementary, my dear Watson, you set yourself a goal. Take exchange for instance - you don't want to let this once in a lifetime chance slip away just because you didn't study. To go on exchange you must have at least a credit average.

Playing FIFA 12 or finding out who Gossip Girl is when you have an exam in a couple of days won't get you on a plane to Harvard University. When you have your eye on the prize (an achievable Average), anything is obtainable, so studying will become a whole lot easier.

STEP 3 - USE 'ALTERNATIVE' APPROACHES

There's always the little gimmick theories that are supposed to help you study. Apparently chewing gum is meant to stimulate your brain cells. For smashing some study I advise chewing 10 pieces of gum at a time for extra efficiency. Orchestral music is also meant to increase concentration. Who knew that Beethoven's greatest hits could help you solve algebra problems?

In the end though kids, to sound as cheesy as possible, believe and you will achieve. Now go forth and prove your tutors, lecturers and ashamed father wrong!

At every university and every festival there is one deliberately-nerdy-thus-ultimately-trendy looking kid with a pale face, killer haircut, skinny jeans on his tiny legs and 'I am Carles' written on his shirt. This is what it's all about.

Carles, along with his sidekick 'The UtiMaTe LAmEsTrEaMeR', churns out relevant, post-modern, buzz commentary at a diabolical rate on their self-reflexive post-hipster blog, Hipster Runoff. Even though he's being completely ironic every time, Carles sets the taste for hipsters, anti-hipsters and post-hipsters worldwide.

The more that people like what he likes, the more he hates what he likes, and tries to either find something new to like or hate on everybody who likes what he likes.

When you get this site, you'll agree that as much as every hipster blogger wants to be him, nobody comes close.

MONUMENT
Children Collide

If you're looking for an album that defies the rock standards established by earlier groups, look no further than this Melbourne three piece's third album.

Monument, though shifting away from the garage vibe that encapsulated Children Collide's first two albums, stays true to form with its contagious choruses and catchy riffs.

I read in a press release that the band have experimented with creating album that is "a little bit less rock", but fans shouldn't be turned off. With successful slower hits like 'Loveless' and 'Future Monks' from their last album, this isn't completely new territory anyway.

'Sword To A Gunfight' sets the tone of the album, with harmonic fade outs on a distorted guitar and a quick fingered bouncy bass line to match. It's no secret that Children Collide are maturing musically, so prepare yourself for what I'm going to label as their best record to date.

7 WORLDS COLLIDE, 7 YEARS APART
Various Artists

Don't you love it when famous people get together, indulge themselves in their own collaborative glory and then congratulate themselves by donating the proceeds to charity? No? Nor do I. And yet, there's no going past this line-up, including Neil & Tim Finn, Eddie Vedder, Johnny Marr, KT Tunstall, Ed O'Brien, Phil Selway and more. As long as you're not into house, dubstep or hip hop, there's something here for everybody.

You know what you're in for when the feature starts with a black and white montage of scenery and musicians, with an overdub of a grey haired rock star starting sentences with, "The idea was to start a band..." Cue a brief tale of trepidation, everybody worrying it might not come off, and then a fade into the band playing music that "speaks for itself".

Frustratingly, the music does speak for itself. I'm gonna have to encourage you to watch this DVD - especially if you're a fan of any one of the musicians involved.

BABYTEETH
Belvoir Theatre

Welcome to an upstairs comedy for those with expensive subscriptions, or desiring a one-night-stand theatre experience.

Babyteeth tells the story of Milla, a young girl dying of cancer. In the early stages of the play we learn about her life and how her parents, who you could swear that you know, react to her drug addict boyfriend Moses. Babyteeth then explores the relationships they all share before she passes away.

It's meant to be a comedy, but you are thrown around emotionally until the very end, when you realize that you've been on the verge of tears, seen naked people and are feeling slightly flustered and overwhelmed.

This dramatic story about real people is really engaging; you develop a fondness for all of the characters, even the drug addict. I loved it.

• Leanora Jackson Collett

SHARK MONTH AT SYDNEY AQUARIUM

Sydney Aquarium has recently undergone a massive renovation and, in celebration, launched a special Shark Month event. I was amazed at how up close and personal visitors can get with the creatures, including a ride in a glass bottomed boat over the tropical reef habitat, feeding the fish and sharks along the way.

The new 'Saws and Claws' exhibit is also worth a look, with enormous Japanese spider crabs and small tooth sawfish on display.

The Aquarium has always been a classic venue for family fun, and, disregarding the haze of childhood nostalgia, it's amazing to find out how much it still has to offer. There are the old favourites such as Penguin Beach, where a flurry of fairy penguins chase schools of fish, as well as a variety of exotic underwater critters, such as upside down jellyfish, sea dragons and deep-sea gropers.

Overall, the aquarium can never go wrong as an enjoyable day out, with enough marvels to impress even the most hardened cynic.

• Ruby Giles

HOLLY THROSBY AND THE HELLO TIGERS

After a year of collaboration with Seeker Lover Keeper, I was excited to catch Holly Throsby and her band, The Hello Tigers performing together again. Their set-list at both The Annandale comprised of a range of oldies and new tunes from Holly's latest album, Team, all of which were delivered at an up-close and intimate level.

Standouts such as 'What I Thought Of You,' 'We're Good People But Why Don't We Show It?' and Holly's only written duet to date, 'Would You?' reminded us of what truly beautiful music sounds and looks like. The definite crowd-pleaser was Throsby's solo rendition of current Triple J favourite, 'Even Though I'm A Woman'.

All in all, the verdict is that I would happily go see the team time and time again - there's nothing like good music for the soul!

I love you more when I'm missing you, it's why I'm always away. Believe me it's true.

Even Though I'm a Woman lyrics

The Culture Club

Q&A

BLITZ TALKS COUTURE, CINEMA AND LIVING ON THE CHEAP WITH ROBBI FROM THE CULTURE CLUB

WHO ARE THE CULTURAL ICONS BEHIND THE CULTURE CLUB?

The Culture Club exec team consists of several bibliophiles and oenophiles; one philosopher, an artist, two scientists, a psychologist, three arts students and an engineer... in various, usually impossible combinations!

HOW DO YOU MAKE UNSW A MORE 'CULTURAL' PLACE?

On campus, we run a wide range of cultural-themed events, including classic, art-house and international film and food nights, wine and cheese tastings, philosophy and discussion evenings, and even a monthly bookclub.

WE HEAR YOU TAKE CULTURE TO THE STREETS?

Off-campus, we run wine trips to the Hunter Valley, and organise groups to explore the city's galleries, wine and cocktail bars, food festivals, music, theatre, comedy and film events, and do our best to score amazing ticket price deals for members!

SO HOW DOES ONE JOIN THE CULTURE CLUB?

Simply by turning up to one of our events. The Culture Club meets regularly at the amazing White House. You can also check us out on The Culture Club Facebook page for a steady stream of cultural goodness and details of our events each week.

AND FINALLY, APART FROM INSTANT STREET CRED, WHAT ELSE DO YOU GET FROM JOINING THE CULTURE CLUB?

Well, all members automatically get access to benefits that include free entry to all our events, discounts at the UNSW Bookstore and cafés throughout Sydney, and free and reduced price ticket offers to NIDA performances, Belvoir Street, Bell Shakespeare and many other cultural events across the city.

Our kind of culture means doing the greatest amount of things on the least amount of money. We've only got a few years of student concession prices left, so we might as well use them while we can!

SPECIAL BLITZ DEAL:
The first 10 people to join our Facebook page and mention that they saw us in Blitz will get free membership to The Culture Club!
