welcome

Blitz Editor
blitzeditor@arc.unsw.edu.au

The second half of semester is always dark and full of terrors - Game of Thrones anyone? You're trapped in a strange pre-post-exam limbo and plagued by an unbearable boredom of study. This week I thought about giving some fancy words of wisdom from Aristotle or Yoda, to up my Main Walkway cred, but there's no point in using clichéd inspirational vomit when Dr Seuss will suffice:

*And when you're in a slump,
You're not in for much fun.
Un-slumping yourself
Is not easily done.*

Blitz wants to help you un-slump, and this week we recommend hauling your ass overseas to do it. Tell your mum you love her (p15), padlock your bedroom so no one can steal your stuff (p17), vote in the Arc Board elections and buy a ticket overseas for the mid-year break (p9). Don't forget to pack Blitz as your in-flight entertainment, especially if you're flying economy.

Chair @ Arc
chair@arc.unsw.edu.au

It's that time of year again that every Chair dreads but is also super excited for.

I'm leaving all of you Blitz lovelies out there in just under 2 months. And in true Chair style, I plan to fill the void with A LOT of travel. It's Week 10, so you have about 6 weeks or so in which you can plan your holiday (it's a good way to procrastinate after all!).

What'll I be doing? I'll be taking a course through my faculty at the Columbia Law School Human Rights Institute in New York City - I'm going to be there on the 4th of July! I'm then going on a massive trip through the US, Mexico and Cuba.

What could you be doing? Things to look out for in future years - Global Village, Walama Muru, even Duke of Edinburgh. These are great Arc programs that give you the opportunity to travel and adventure while doing good for local communities.

a quickie with THE CAIROS

IF YOU'RE STILL IN DE-NILE THAT YOU HAVE ASSIGNMENT DUE DATES, YOU'LL BE EXTRA JELLY OF THESE GUYS WITH UPCOMING NATIONAL TOUR DATES...

Maybe there's something in the water? Or maybe our northern rivals are keeping something from us? Whatever it is, as long as Brisbane keeps producing catchy indie four-pieces, us down here in Sydney will put up with their State of Origin arrogance.

We've heard from Last Dinosaurs and The Jungle Giants, but the latest young guns to come out of the Sunshine State are The Cairos. With Alistair Richardson on rhythm guitar and lead vocals, Alfio Allvuzza on lead guitar, Reuben on Schafer bass, and BC Michaels on drums, you already get the sense that due to their alternative titles, The Cairos are just that - different.

Despite being super busy with the release of their debut EP Colours Like Features, and currently on a fast selling out, east coast tour with Mutemath, lead man Richardson made sure he set aside some time to speak to Blitz.

When we quizzed Richardson on how he initially got involved in music, he spoke as if it was always destined to happen. "My family has always been very musical; there were always guitars lying around the house and my dad would play the likes of Simon and Garfunkel and The Beatles." The happy-love-hippy vibe lingers on in The Cairo's recent EP release, so dubstep fans might want to keep Skrillex on loop. The release includes the hit single 'We All Buy Stars' which, if you listen to Triple J, has tamed and had your ears on standby ever since. Along with this track, five more epic tunes make up the record.

Richardson also described the writing process for The Cairo's. "It changes every time; some of those songs [on Colours Like Features] were done on the spot and some have been around for years; none of them were written in the same way though." Fortunately for us this doesn't give the EP just one particular sound; we get high-tempo tracks like 'Shame', as well as songs that are much more centred on Alistair's vocals, like 'Lena'.

The boys have just finished their nationwide tour with Loon Lake and Blueju!ce - and for a bunch of guys that have only just finished school, there was no hiding their excitement. "We'd never actually done a nationwide tour, so I was nervous but definitely moreso excited."

Richardson was also able to confirm the band already have plans to release a full album. "We definitely want to record an album before December and get it released early next year." Keeping this announcement in mind, it seems the only way for the band to head now is up. So what's on the agenda now? "The most important thing to do is save money for flights for tours."

To ensure the band's success and to make sure they never have to bust their piggy banks again to go on tour, Blitz has set up a trust fund in my name - please send your monies (preferably no cheques) to our office that we will then forward to The Cairos...

Check out myspace.com/thecairos or follow them on Twitter for hilarious posts like "Brisbane bands are the shit. End of story." You can also grab tix to their Sydney show on Wednesday May 16th at Hi Fi here: thehifi.com.au.

get out of town

DITCH YOUR COURSE OUTLINES AND PICK UP A LONELY PLANET – IT'S TIME TO START PLANNING SOME MID-YEAR BREAK MADNESS.

• Henry Cornwell

Yeah, it's time here at Blitz HQ to own up: we've made a lot of mistakes over the years, and when we're not dishing out our golden advice, we're fumbling through our own deadline-driven lives, waiting for things to fall apart completely. However, nowhere have we made as many mistakes as overseas; each day we've woken up, confused yet stoked to find we're still there. From broken bones and sleeping in the snow, to waking up naked with nowhere to go, we've done it all – and here's how to avoid our mistakes.

Keep Your Clothes On

Not only for the weather – believe it or not, there are some parts of the world in which people don't want to see your bangin' bod. Just because the blokes you met from WA are cruising around in thongs and singlets doesn't mean it's fine for you to, so keep an eye out for what the locals are wearing. Also, don't be a douche – in India for instance, you'll notice that the only people cruising in Saris are the white people who like to sit in cafés and say things like "I've found myself".

Soak Up Some Shots

The reason people go to Boat Week in Croatia and that shitty saltpan in South America where you look like you're floating is not because they're cool or fun, it's because they look cool and fun when you post the pics on your FB page to make your friends back at UNSW jealous. It's all about the image, baby. If it's not on camera, it didn't happen. Be sure to look either deep or fun-loving in every photo, but preferably both.

Challenge Your Cheap Ass Student Skills

People love to overcharge tourists; the best way to avoid this is actually to avoid things you'll have to pay for – plus it will add to your experience (think about it: how many locals do you see purchasing expensive touristy gimmicks?). Avoid forking out cash for cabs – by foot is probably the best way to see more of the city. Go to the beach you don't have to pay to lie on; this'll also give you a better view of local culture than the one where you do.

Savour, Scrounge, Sponge

Generally speaking, the cheaper the tastier (but you already know that from Tropical Green's chicken rolls, right?). Of course, free can also pay off: I've got mates who lived on the uneaten remnants of other people's restaurant meals for three weeks in Europe – just think of the money towards textbooks. When abroad, you'll find all kinds of things that you probably won't get a chance to eat again, but most of the time you'll be pleasantly surprised. Yes, you could get sick, but it's part of the experience – just consider it a detox.

Pack a butt-plug

Eye Up Before You Down

For the most part, you'll love the locals – people all over the world are great. But every culture has its creeps, so you should be as careful as you'd be at UniBar, with the added caution of a person who doesn't speak the language or know their way around. It's rare that anybody will spike your drink, but you don't want to be a statistic.

Splurge on spontaneity

Nothing will ever go to plan, and that's part of the fun. Put a few key experiences on your must-do list and leave the rest to chance and the inspiration of the moment; the last thing you want is to feel like a slave to your schedule.

The later you leave it to book flights the more time you have to put it off – nothing's more motivating to get through that assignment than a date of departure to foreign shores. Blitz's motto: Only put off until tomorrow the things you're happy to die without having done – after all, you brought your laptop to class for a reason, so get on skyscanner.com and book those flights buddy. Then come home fresh, relaxed and ready to smash second semester.

MAMA MIA

SICK OF ALL THIS LOVEY-DOVEY MOTHER'S DAY ADVICE THAT'S ASSAULTING YOUR TV SCREENS IN THE LEAD UP TO THE BIG DAY? HERE ARE SOME HINTS FOR RELUCTANT OFFSPRING.

TREAT HER TO A FANCY LUNCH.

Order big and make comments like, "it's your special day, Mum, and I want to treat you!" You can probably get your dad to pay for it.

PRETEND THAT YOU WORK FOR HALLMARK.

Many women have this ridiculous notion that if you make it yourself, it's "from the heart". Don't question it, just take advantage. If you're resourceful you can even make her a present, saving you anywhere between $5 and $50 (the calculus depends on how much you otherwise would have spent on her, minus the cost of the raw materials).

CHANNEL YOUR INNER CHARLES DARWIN

Walking in the Botanic Gardens is free and, if it's a sunny day, she'll find it a real treat and boring as it may be, her gratitude will be worthwhile. Just don't go when rains, and don't make her walk too far. She'll never forgive you.

TOUCH HER INAPPROPRIATELY.

That's disgusting; I would never do this. The editor tells me giving your mum a foot rub would be a nice thing to do - whatever. If you want to, I guess you can do that. Creep.

Play your cards right and you might even be lucky enough to get away with ignoring her for the next six months (or until her birthday, depending on which comes first).
Happy Mother's Day!

FIVE MOST PATHETIC VILLIANS

As an homage to the release of The Avengers (check our review on p18), Blitz has taken the alternate approach and come up with a super team of the five most pathetic villains.

The Penguin. The short, fat, round, beak nosed rogue somehow got consistent airtime as one of Batman's most feared villains. The only super power this Oompa Loompa possessed was the extreme ability to look like a penguin. [Ed: A skill useless to 98% of the population.]

2

Captain Boomerang. If this character was created to impress Australian audiences, DC Comics failed. Captain Boomerang was one of the Hulks enemies who tried to bring the big green guy down with gimmicked boomerangs. He failed and died.

3

Eye Scream. A mutant himself, Eye Scream made it his objective in life to kill all of the X-Men. His only super power was - wait for it - he could turn into any ice-cream flavour he desired. Seriously, this isn't a lie!

4

Condiment King. Possessing no super powers whatsoever, the Condiment King relied on none other than handy household items ketchup and mustard as a means of defeating his enemies. It still surprises me Hollywood has yet to base a movie on this evil genius.

Mr Fish. It gets more embarrassing when you find out that Mr Fish's catchphrase was, "No one laughs at Mr Fish". Well, Mr Fish I have to tell you that everyone was, and still, is laughing at you.

home, sweet home

To live at home or not to live at home, that is the question.

If there's anything university students are known for, it's laziness and a constant tight arse money situation, so it's no surprise that a large amount of UNSW students live at home. For those currently tossing up whether to live on campus, rent an apartment (read: sh*thole) near Coogee, or remain with mum and dad at home, Blitz is going to make that decision a whole lot easier. After going through our list of pros and cons, hopefully you'll be able to make a mature decision on where you're going to be sleeping with your favourite blanky and night light.

living at home

pros

• It's free. Your mum doesn't want to see you go, so she's promised she'll never charge you rent. It really doesn't get much more enticing than that. In-between jobs or getting next to no shifts? No worries! You have no bills or scary landlords to be worrying about.

• Privacy. You've got your own room (hopefully). Whether cruising through your course on a pass grade or knuckling down with a distinction average, being able to go home and waste time in your humble abode is sometimes the only thing keeping you sane.

cons

• Siblings. Oh to escape them! Wouldn't that just make your life a whole lot easier?

• The Guilt. All your friends have moved out and you feel like such a sloth for not moving on. You start to wonder "am I falling behind? Am I not maturing? Will I ever be successful?" You know where those thoughts can lead...

leaving home

pros

• Self-confidence. "Ooh look at me, I've moved out like big people do." Yes you have! Good for you! You're practically ready to run for president of the world now, way to go!

• Bachelor/bachelorette life. Don't be afraid to invite your newfound friend from Unibar home. After all, your new crib is looking mighty damn fine. That Interior Design Gen Ed has totally paid off.

cons

• Food. So instead of your mum's roast lamb or lasagne, you find yourself tossing up between baked beans on toast or Mi Goreng, and, having already eaten a combination of both for lunch, things aren't looking good.

• Roommates. You were expecting your roomie to be a sexy member of the opposite sex and instead you got a crazy Cat Lady or a schizophrenic divorcee who wonders why you won't play with them.

Remember: Wherever you decide to live, try to make sure uni isn't too far away as trekking it to UNSW during peak hour should be avoided at all costs. Also, know that wherever you eventually choose to live, Blitz supports your reasoning, due to the fact you based it purely on this well thought out article.

Shit My Students Write
shitmystudentswrite.tumblr.com

Nothing like the stupidity of others to pick you up and get you through your ticks. Provided you don't find any of your own work, you're gonna love this blog.

It doesn't offer much info, but presumably it's run and fuelled by a few US college teachers who like to vent their rage at human idiocy and their own broken dreams by posting the most hilarious excerpts of their students' submissions.

Take, for instance, "I believe that life begins at contraception." Or, "Many of the statements are only identified as 'Ibid' in the footnotes. I am not skeptical of Ibid's view, but I would like to find his/her article and read it for myself." Dig in.

Other favourite posts include: "first aid for contact with H2O: flush eyes with water, rinse skin with water, if ingested, get medical help" and "murder is the number one cause of itself."

BLUNDERBUSS
 Jack White

There are some people who simply ooze cool from their every pore; everything that they do leaves you wanting more, and you would do anything, and I mean anything, to be their friend. Jack White is one of these people. Front man of the recently deceased The White Stripes, White is one of the few consistently awesome musicians and thankfully his debut solo album Blunderbuss continues this trend.

A cross-genre feast for the ears is the best way to describe Blunderbuss, with White taking the listener on a musical tour through blues, rock and roll, and even a touch of soul. My personal favourite track is 'I'm Shakin', with the "oohs" and "ahhs" from backing singers and Jack's lyrical pronunciations sending chills down my spine.

Overall, Blunderbuss affirms Jack White's status of one of the great musicians of the modern era, taunting his peers on track 'Sixteen Saltines' by crooning, "Who's jealous, who's jealous of whom?" Jack, they're jealous of you.

• FILM 11/10

THE AVENGERS
 Director: Joss Whedon
 Starring: Robert Downy Jr.

If you were thinking about releasing a superhero film you may want to wait a while, as The Avengers will be one hard act to follow.

The blockbuster sees heroes Iron Man, The Hulk, Captain America, Thor, Black Widow and Hawkeye, led by Samuel L Jackson (or Fury if you like), come together from different ages and galaxies to stop Thor's evil brother, Loki, from world domination.

You could argue that the storyline falls down a somewhat foreseeable path, with egos clashing before coming together in one final battle, but the amazing effects and characters won't have you minding the clichés.

The two and a half hour long feature will race past as you're captivated from the first scene, featuring the hot Cobie Smulders (How I Met Your Mother's Robyn), to the last.

Finally we see director Joss Whedon return to his Toy Story best that will have you trading in your Buzz Lightyear doll for a flashy Iron Man action figure.

THE UNIVERSE IN ZERO WORDS
 Dana Mackenzie

If you're anything like me and your understanding of maths extends as far as addition, subtraction, division and multiplication, then you may find The Universe In Zero Words a little tough going at times. Dana Mackenzie can't help but adorn pages with a scramble of letters with numbers and little Greek characters that, in my mind, don't make any sense - but don't be deterred! This boundless enthusiasm for complicated arithmetic is to be expected from such a passionate and knowledgeable math whiz.

Stick with it and you'll forgive the parts that you don't understand and will no doubt come across many interesting facts about the origins of cosmic ideas from the most brilliant minds in history.

The Universe In Zero Words has certainly increased my curiosity for the big unknown and I look forward to getting my hands on any future publications by Mackenzie .

WE NEED TO TALK ABOUT KEVIN
 Director: Lynne Ramsay
 Starring: Tilda Swinton

This beautifully shot ad for contraception is not one you want to see with your girlfriend, boyfriend, mother or brother. It's a must if you were intrigued by the novel the film's based on and have an idea as to what it was about, but weren't interested enough to actually read it. We Need To Talk About Kevin is also well worth your time if you've read the novel and are interested to see how they adapted it.

But as a stand-alone experience, it leaves me a little wanting. Don't get me wrong: The flashbacks and forwards are exceptionally well navigated, and, despite possible surprises in casting (like two Caucasians with a Eurasian baby?), the acting's fantastic.

However, a key experience of the novel is your mistrust of the mother Eva's (Tilda Swinton) narration of the events and there's no scope for that kind of ambiguity in film (apparently), and, at times director Lynne Ramsay's portrayal of events seems unrealistic.

TOMAHAWK TECHNIQUE
 Sean Paul

After listening to Sean Paul's latest release Tomahawk Technique, it's good to know that some things never change. My last encounter with Jamaican artist Sean Paul was back when 'Temperature' was in my top ten playlist. Five years later, Sean Paul's creative style hasn't changed much, but at least his songs remain fun and flirty.

Despite the fact that Tomahawk Technique offers nothing new and none of the tracks are likely to be huge chart-toppers (although at the time of writing this review Carly Rae Jepsen's 'Call Me Maybe' is currently number one in Australia, so you never know), Tomahawk Technique will undoubtedly pack dance floors in well-loved student establishments such as Sidebar.

Secretly, I quite enjoy 'She Doesn't Mind'; it's just a good old school dance/R&B song which is refreshing among today's onslaught of indie music.

UNSW CUE SOC

TEAR UP SOME TABLES WITH UNSW'S OFFICIAL POOL SHARKS

No, it's not a club dedicated to queuing - CueSoc are our go-to pool pros on campus, dedicated to being the best at games played on fancy tables and teaching UNSW students how to win with a stick. They first hit the tables in 2010 and are spreading as fast as they pocket balls. Blitz crossed cues with CueSoc President Matthew Lau to discuss the perfect pocket, pool parties and the perks of being a member.

Q&A

So, is CueSoc all about sinking balls in holes?

Yeah... we have competitions, workshops and chill sessions where members can meet and hang out over free pool. We also have pool and snooker workshops at least twice a semester, and will probably start to do it more often next semester.

But seriously, is pool really a sport? I mean, it's fun - but a sport?

A sport is defined as 'a recreational activity' or 'an activity engaged in for relaxation and amusement' - so, for sure (it is)! Pool is often played for relaxation, but cue sports are played worldwide, with major tournaments. Plus there's specific equipment designed for this sport, and players have to use their hand, eye and body coordination to play the game.

Alright, so if it's there a science to it, what's the secret to the perfect shot?

It's about the perfect combination of control, spin and power - all to be revealed at our CueSoc events...

Ahhh well played Matthew, any other reasons why we should take our cue from you and join?

The free shit; as a CueSoc member, you get a membership card which gives you a table and locker hire discount at CityHeroes (mammoth pool hall) on George St. Also, at the start of every semester, members are entered into a raffle to win entry passes, vouchers, free lessons, and mores - so get excited for semester 2!

What would you say to a beginner who wants to join CueSoc, but has a sinking feeling they'll be beaten all the time by more experienced members?

Never fear! We'll teach you the techniques and skills to beat and impress all of your friends.

Pool tables got a bad rap in The Accused, so it's time to give them an image makeover - now go get some practice at the Roundhouse pool tables then take it to the next level with the kids from CueSoc (note, these skills might also come in handy if studying trigonometry in Mathematics 1A).

Where: CityHeroes Pool & Snooker (under George St Event Cinemas).

When: Saturdays 11am

What to bring: Your lucky cue - but if you don't have one, they'll take care of you.
